'GRAFT' PROBE BY GRAND JURY

Sughrue Turns Over All Evidence in His Possession to Assistant District Attorney Dwyer—Facts to Be Presented.

Attorney M. J.. Sughrue, counsel of the Finance Commission, this afternoon turned over to Assistant District Attorney M. J. Dwyer all the evidence given to him personally and at the public hearing yesterday in connection with the contracts of the Suffolk Contracting Company and the boiler companies.

"This evidence will be at once placed before the Grand Jury," Mr. Dwyer declared to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

The testimony in regard to the Suffolk Contracting Company was given by former Councilman Charles M. Callahan and Leo F. McCullough, president of the Common Council.

Callahan admitted that President McCullough was his partner in the Suffolk Contracting Company. This company secured a number of contracts from the city.

Law Without Penalty.

Because the statute which prohibits a member of the city government from being connected with any city contracts does not provide a penalty, the Finance Commission does not believe that any legal action will result.

It was decided, however, that all of the testimony should be laid before the district attorney to take any action that he may think necessary.

Whether admission of a conspiracy to defraud the city has been made in the testimony of the representatives of boiler firms who said that they acted together in making bids to the city, the Finance Commission leaves to the District Attorney's office and the Grand Jury to decide, should the evidence be placed before that body.

All of the testimony given by Duncan D. Russell of the James Russell Boiler Works; Alfred E. Cox, former member of the Governor's Council and treasurer of the Atlantic Works; John E. Lynch, treasurer of the Hodge company, and Charles F. Koopman, former manager of the Cunningham Iron Works, has been turned over to Mr. Dwyer.

It was charged by Attorney Sughrue that combinations had been formed among bidders on certain city contracts and arrangements made among them for a division of profits.

Destroyed Cash Book.

Treasurer Duncan D. Russell admitted that he destroyed his cash book when he learned that the commission was to investigate some of the boiler contracts in schoolhouses.

Hon. Alfred E. Cox admitted that his company received $300 as its share of the profits on schoolhouse repairs, although his company had not performed any of the work.

Testimony of sharing in profits was given by Lynch and Koopman.

In executive session to-day the members of the commission, with Attorney Sughrue, went carefully over the testimony given yesterday, and to Mr. Sughrue personally before the papers were sent to the District Attorney's office.

Seek Waste in Sewers.

The commission also in private to-day took up consideration of sewer contracts in which it is charged sewers were built on many streets where they were neither connected with houses or with the main system. The commission desires to learn whether several hundred thousand dollars of the city's money has been spent simply to make profit for favored politicians.

Chief Engineer Dorr, of the Sewer department, Harrison P. Eddy, of Metcalf and Eddy, the commission's engineering experts and Franklin M. Miner, of the surveying division of the street department, were all witnesses before the commission to-day.

WARSHIPS TO PROTECT FOREIGNERS

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Hayti, March 17.—French Minister Carteron, in a cable to his home government to-day, says an attack on the foreign legations and the consulates is imminent. He refers to Minister of the Interior Le Conte as bloodthirsty.

Despite the arrival of the British cruiser Indefatigable and the German cruiser Bremen, President Nord Alexis is still defiant.

He has formally notified the French consulate at Gonaives that the accused Haytian revolutionists sheltered there must be surrendered to him or he will take them by force.

The boldness of the President's step has fairly paralyzed foreigners living in Hayti. It was generally considered almost impossible that it would go to the extreme of an actual ultimatum, which cannot fail to be looked upon by the French Government except as an almost open declaration of war.

France is protecting about one hundred refugees—among them General Firmin, leader of the recent rebellion and instigator of another one the government declares was to have been begun March 16, had it not been nipped in the bud, with the assassination of Nord Alexis and the principal officials under him.

Terror still reigns in principal cities of the republic. Business is suspended, and the foreigners are fleeing to the protection of their consulates.

The Port au Prince streets are heavily guarded by detachments of troops with machine guns, and especially strong forces are on duty about the government buildings, against which it is believed there is danger of a demonstration of the full-blood negroes, who sympathize rather with Firmin than with Nord Alexis, the latter being regarded among the islanders as the champion of the mixed blood population.

The two cruisers are lying in the harbor. The situation is quiet at present. There have been no negotiations as yet between the cruisers' commanders and the Haytien authorities.

The United States gunboat Eagle has steamed from Guantanamo for Port au Prince and the French cruiser la d'Estrees is enroute to Gonaives.

100,000 CHEER GREAT EVACUATION PAGEANT

RECORD-BREAKING CROWDS JOIN IN CELEBRATION IN SOUTH BOSTON.

More than 100,000 men, women and children lined the streets in South Boston this afternoon along which the great Evacuation Day parade, led by Chief Marshal Michael F. Smart, moved.

Long before the hour of starting Andrews square and Thomas Park was packed with eager but patiently waiting throngs. The multitude had come from near and preservation of order were perfect, but the crowd was an orderly one and the bluecoats had but little to do beyond keeping the crowds from the streets.

As the great procession swept along it was greeted everywhere with cheers and shouts of approval. Not in years has South Boston and its friends turned out to celebrate Evacuation Day as to-day, the one hundred and thirty-second commemoration of the day when George Washington made Boston too hot for the British invaders. Not in years has such a splendid and representative pageant rewarded the expectation of the crowds.

To the strains of many bands the long parade moved through the principal streets of South Boston, everyone of which was ablaze with color, the stars and stripes being twined with the green banner of Ireland in commemoration of St. Patrick's Day.

The day was ushered in by the firing of the great guns of the navy yard and the pealing of thousands of bells. At noon another salute was fired and the bells rang once more. The public and parochial school children joined the happy throngs in the streets ofr a half holiday had been given them.

Breakfast by Mayor Hibbard.

The first formal function of Evacuation Day was the breakfast which was given in the Hotel Bellevue by Mayor George A. Hibbard. Among his guests of honor were Major-General William P. Duvall, U. S. A.; Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper, who represented Governor Curtis Guild; Congressmen Lloyd of Missouri and Joseph F. O'Connell of the Tenth Massachusetts District, President David L. White of the South Boston Citizens' Association, William Kells, chairman of the Evacuation Day Committee, and members of the South Boston Citizens' Association and of the Evacuation Day Committee.

In all the public schools of South Boston special exercises in commemoration of Evacuation Day were held and the children listened to historic addresses or to selected readings, which were calculated to fire their young hearts with patriotism for the sturdy valor of the men of Massachusetts in driving the invader from their home.

FIGHT--EXTRA--BASEBALL

Tommy Burns of America and Jem Roche of Ireland battle for the heavyweight championship of the world in Dublin to-night. The result will be given in an extra edition [illegible] BOSTON AMERICAN. The fight is scheduled to begin [illegible] Boston time.

Real BASEBALL will have its beginning for the season of 1908 when the Boston Red Sox meet the Little Rock team at Little Rock this afternoon. Complete details will be given in the BASEBALL extra of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

EVANS QUITS FLEET; THOMAS TO COMMAND

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Official announcement was made this afternoon by Secretary of the Navy Metcalf that Rear Admiral Evans, on his own application and on account of ill health, will be relieved of the command of the battleship fleet at San Francisco and that he will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, now his second in command.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—A special dispatch from San Diego, Cal., contains news of an announcement to-day by Rear Admiral Evans, commander of the Atlantic fleet, that upon its arrival at San Francisco he would ask the navy department to relieve him from further duty on account of his ill health.

This announcement officially confirms the report from Washington that Admiral Evans would haul down his flag upon arriving at San Francisco.

Seriously Ill.

A dispatch from San Diego says:

Civilian passengers arriving here on the supply ship Buffalo from Magdalena Bay bring a report of the condition of Admiral Evans that is very alarming. They say he is so seriously ill that they doubt he would live through a journey to Washington. They say he has only twice been outside his cabin since the fleet left Hampton Roads, and that on each of those occasions the moving about caused him great suffering.

Immediately on the arrival of the fleet at Magdalena Bay there was a consultation of the surgeons of the fleet with respect to the admiral's condition. The admiral had severe rheumatic gout in his legs and is likely to develop Bright's disease.

Wireless to Roosevelt.

Chief of Staff Ingersoll said the admiral would be lucky if he is able to get into a parlor car after arriving at San Francisco.

After the consultation the admiral sent a wireless message to President Roosevelt stating that his condition was serious, and asking for retirement immediately after arrival at San Francisco.

The President replied, hoping the admiral's condition was not so bad as reported. The admiral sent another wireless message saying he had no alternative but to quit and asking for retirement as soon as possible.

4 DEAD, 20 HURT IN EXPLOSION

COALMONT, Ind., March 17.—As a result of an explosion in one of the ten wheelhouses of the United States powder mills, four men are dead and twenty badly injured. They were all employed in the powder plant. All the windows in the village were broken. Plate glass windows and many other windows were broken in Linton, Indiania, eighteen miles away.

CARDINAL GIBBONS TO ERIN'S SONS IN AMERICA

"THE duty of the descendants of the Irish race in America is three-fold: Toward their God; toward the country of their forefathers; and toward their adopted land."

His Eminence Cardinal Gibbon's to-day dictated the above sentiment of appreciation of the Irish, commemorative of St. Patrick's Day, over the long distance telephone to the Hearst News Service from the cardinal's residence in Baltimore.

HONOR ST. PATRICK IN MUSIC AND FEASTING

BOSTON'S TRIBUTE TO ERIN'S SAINT IS WIDESPREAD AND SINCERE.

With music and song, feasting and church service, all the loyal Irishmen and Irish-Americans of Greater Boston and vicinity are celebrating St. Patrick's day today. The green predominates in every section.

On the lapel of every coat is a sprig of shamrock or green ribbon; on many public buildings mammoth green flags and bunting decorations of green wave proudly in the breeze, and to-night old-time Irish music will stir thousands at private and semi-public celebrations to be held under the auspices of dozens of Irish and Irish-American societies.

None More Loyal Than Here.

In no section of the country perhaps can more loyal, warm-hearted and enthusiastic Irishmen be found than in Boston. Their observance of St. Patrick's day does not pattern after the public celebrations in some cities, but nevertheless, when they gather at public and private celebrations this evening, the enthusiasm and genuine sincerity that will abound will not be surpassed anywhere.

A more beautiful day for the observance of the birth of Erin's patron saint could not be expected. It dawned bright and clear and, with smiling skies, a bright, warm sun and a gentle breeze. The morning services in many of the Catholic churches were attended by thousands, and at the Cathedral, where a solemn high mass was celebrated at 9 a. m., with a panegyric on "St. Patrick" by the Rev. Father Meagher, O. P., the service was especially brilliant.

This afternoon dancing and card parties are in order, and this evening there will be lectures, dinners, concerts and minstrel shows and informal affairs under the auspices of many divisions of the A. O. H. The biggest event of the day in Boston will be the anniversary banquet at the Hotel Brunswick this evening of the Charitable Irish Society of Boston. Governor Guild is expected to be present and speak, with other distinguished guests.

Dedication in South Boston.

The Hibernians of South Boston will open and dedicate their new building, formerly known as Dahlgren Hall, on E street, and County President Dillon and other officers of the organization will be present and take part in the exercises.

National President Matthew J. Cummings of the A. O. H. will be a guest at the Toronto, Canada, celebration to be held at Massey Music Hall.

OBSERVANCES IN CHURCHES BEGAN AT 6 O'CLOCK TO-DAY

With ringing of belfry bells at 6 a. m. to-day the religious observance of the feast of Ireland's Saint was ushered in by Catholic churches throughout the city. Low masses were celebrated at 6 o'clock, 7 and 8 o'clock, with more solemn ceremonials at 9 and 10.

At the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Washington street Rev. J. P. Meagher, O. P., the Dominican priest in charge of the band of missionaries, delivered a panegyric on "St. Patrick" during the solemn high mass at 9 o'clock. At the same hour Rev. Arthur T. Connolly, rector of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, was delivering a sermon on "The Life of St. Patrick" at his own church in Jamaica Plain.

Rev. John D. Butler, S. J., one of the best-known orators among the clergy in this city, took "St. Patrick" for the subject of his sermon at the 10 o'clock solemn high mass in the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

This evening patriotic lectures will be held in the parish halls of several Catholic churches in the city and suburbs. Entertainments will be given by Hibernians, Knights of Columbus and Foresters.

LUCE-COLE PETITION IS TURNED DOWN

Adverse Report on Direct Nomination Plan for All Candidates.

If Speaker of the House John N. Cole and Representative Robert Luce of Somerville want to see the "direct nomination of all candidates for State elective offices" written into the laws of Massachusetts, they will have to fight for it on the floor of the House.

The Cole-Luce bill received the expected bump to-day when the Committee on Election Laws voted to give Cole and Luce "leave to withdraw" their petition for legislation. Messrs. McCarthy, Duane and Coleman dissent.

The State Branch, American Federation of Labor, asked for a similar law. Same report.

Senator Linehan wanted to elect County Commissioners for Suffolk, "Leave to withdraw" was also voted to Linehan.

The committee turned down, with the same recommendation, the Robert Treat Paine, Jr., "Public Opinion" bill.

POLICE RESCUE BOY CAPTIVE OF GYPSIES

LAD FOUND IN PITIABLE CONDITION—CHIEF OF TRIBE ARRESTED.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, March 17.—In the raid last night on the home of Joshua Stanley, leader of one of the famous Stanley bands of gypsies, at No. 860 Eastern avenue, the police discovered a 16-year-old boy half-dead from the ill-treatment he has received during the eight months he declared he has been held captive by the gypsies. Stanley was put under arrest and is held pending an investigation of the case.

The boy's condition was pitiable. His clothes were a mass of rags, and his body was covered with filth and vermin. Lack of food had reduced him to skin and bones. Not only was he so weak he could hardly walk, but the cruel treatment has so affected his mind that even with the best of care he may never recover.

For the most of the time the boy says he had been kept locked in a dark, loathsome room, where he was subjected to all sorts of abusive treatment. When he was allowed to go out he had only bundles of rags to protect his feet from the cold.

The police believe the boy to be Leonard Allen of Middletown, N. Y., and think that he was kidnapped by the Stanley tribe during their visit to that city last August. He has been taken to the city poor farm, while efforts are being made to locate his parents.

Just why he was held captive, unless it was in the hope of obtaining a ransom for his release, is a mystery, as he was in no condition to do any work.

The discovery of the captive boy was due to the long-standing feud between the gypsy tribes headed by Joshua and Thomas Stanley, which has grown more bitter since the elopement of Jennie, the pretty daughter of Thomas Stanley, with Samuel, the son of Joshua. The couple fled at midnight to New Bedford last week, and are believed to have been married in that city.

O'CONNELL HELD AS INCENDIARY

Francis O'Connell, 40 years old, of No. 35 Horace street, Somerville, was arraigned in the Somerville court to-day charged with setting fire to the dwelling house, No. 33 Horace street, late last night, causing over a score of the occupants to flee in their night clothes.

O'Connell waived examination and after a number of the witnesses had given testimony he was held in $70 bonds for the June sitting of the Grand Jury.

GIVE DANCE TO MEN FRIENDS

The Sharon Fortnightly Club gave their annual entertainment and dance to their men friends at the Town Hall last night. Fred Kendall, humorist, impersonator and singer, entertained the assembly for an hour or so, after which a collation was served, and dancing indulged in until midnight. The hall was tastily decorated.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Kittredge, the new president of the club, was chairman of the committee, assisted by Mrs. T. F. Quinn and Mrs. John H. Cori. Mrs. George A. Dennett and Mrs. T. F. Quinn poured. The ushers were Dr. George A. Dennett, Perry Fiske and Arthur Haberstroh.

SHOT SWEETHEART; JAP KILLS HIMSELF

NEW YORK, March 17.—Frank Kito, a Japanese cook, fired five bullets into the body of Mrs. Lizzie Huls, aged twenty-five, who had spurned his love, and then drank carbolic acid.

Kito was dead before a physician reached him. Mrs. Huls will recover. Kito was twenty-five years old.

WOMAN 41 DAYS IN TRANCE.

PASTOR FINED FOR DEFENCE OF ANARCHIST

Rev. Eliot White of Worcester Pays $10 for Disturbing the Peace.

DENIES POLICE DEFIANCE

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, March 17.—On the positive testimony of the police that he loudly defied the officers to arrest him, the Rev. Eliot White, former rector of the fashionable St. John's Episcopal Church, who was arrested in the anarchist disturbance last night, was fined $10 by Judge Samuel Utley in Worcester District Court to-day for disturbing the peace.

Mr. White drew his personal check for the fine and left the court.

His check was accepted without cavil. He has money of his own, and, in addition, his wife is very wealthy in her own right. Her property is estimated at $500,000.

Mrs. White was not in court. She is in delicate health. But word had been sent her last night of Mr. White's arrest, and she expressed no fear but that he knew what he was doing and would come to no harm.

White had conducted his own case. He admitted that he had declared in front of the Anarchists' meeting hall, when he found no meeting was permitted, that "This isn't liberty." He said, however, that he was not bound at that time for the Anarchists' meeting, but for a regular session of the Socialists' Club, to which he belongs.

Denies Police Defi.

In contradiction of the flat statements of Patrolman Henry McLeod and of Captain of Detectives Patrick O'Day that later he had loudly defied O'Day to arrest him, the clergyman said dramatically:

"I did say, 'Arrest me if you want to, I am ready.' But, as a minister of the gospel and a Christian I take oath before God, which is as sacred here as it could be before the altar in my church, that I never used the word 'defy.'"

Fully 1,000 people streamed into Waldo street and jammed about police headquarters to get into the hearing, but the police shut all from the courtroom except those connected with the cases on the docket, reporters and a large number of lawyers who came from professional interest.

Parishioners Absent.

When the court opened the crowd swarmed into the corridor and blocked it from end to end. It was noticeable that none of White's former parishioners of the St. John's Church congregation came to his succor or seemed to show any interest in the matter. But many well-known Socialists were among the crowd, all talking excitedly for the cleric.

After his night in the cell—for he had persistenly refused offers of bail, White walked up the stairway midway in a line of "drunks" and other petty offenders. He took his place in the dock and waited while eight cases were disposed of, including intoxication, petty larceny, track walking and so on.

White wore his Episcopal vest and collar, but had on a dark, mixed sack coat instead of the ecclesiastical frock. He seemed a trifle nervous.

Clerk of Courts Major E. T. Raymond read the charge of disturbing the peace, to which White pleaded "Not guilty" in firm voice.

Patrolman Henry McLeod testified:

"I said to White: 'You can't talk to this crowd and excite them. Move on.'

Arrest Threatened.

"He replied: 'I have a perfect right to stand here and talk with my friend. You can't make me move on.' I said: 'If you talk like that you're liable to get arrested.' He answered: 'You'd better arrest me then.' I left him and got Captain O'Day."

Then McLeod testified White defied O'Day.

Judge Utley: "How loud was Mr. White talking?"

McLeod: "I could hear him fifty feet away."

Captain O'Day testified he told White he ought to know better than to talk like that and that White replied:

"I defy you or anybody else to move me. I have a perfect right to stand here. Arrest me if you want to."

O'Day told the court he could have heard White across the street.

Did Not Defy Police.

White, in his own behalf, took his sacred oath he had not "defied" the police to arrest him and declared he was talking with Freeman in an ordinary tone of voice. He said the crowd at no time was over 150, whereas the police said there were 1,500. He said he told O'Day:

"If a Worcester citizen hasn't got a right to talk to a friend in the middle of the street it is time somebody looked into the matter."

City Solicitor Vaughan, who was detailed to look after the city's interests by Mayor James Logan, asked White:

"Are you an Anarchist?"

White—"No, I do not believe in their principles. But I think they ought to have free speech."

Talked in Ordinary Tone.

White called Attorney Edward Freeman, with whom he had been talking when arrested. Freeman swore that White had not used the word "defy" to Captain O'Day or Patrolman McLeod, also that White did not talk above an ordinary tone.

Walter J. Hoar, the Socialitsic leader, swore that White did not talk above an ordinary tone.

In passing sentence, Judge Utley said:

"Apparently they want license, not liberty. The question is not what they were saying, but whether they were saying it in a way to disturb the peace.

"Anarchistic doctrines are all right, but God help the town where they are carried out."

"FREE SPEECH DENIED."

After the hearing Mr. White said:

"Contrary to the advice of my friends, I declined to appeal from the fine. I have no wish to fight the case. I believe it is already sufficiently set forth before the public. Any one might have been treated as I was, but not every one is in a position to make as effectual a protest. I concluded it was time some one decided to take the consequences in order to focus public attention on the great subject of the denial of the American right of free speech.

"I fully recognize that the course I chose is open to disapproval, but I acted deliberately and as nearly as possible in accordance with the tremendous gravity of the issue at stake. The future alone can show whether it was worth the sacrifice. I believ it was."

Alexander Berkman, the Anarchist, whose advertised address led to the trouble last night, and who went to the house of a friend for the night, did not appear at the hearing to-day. He is to leave town this afternoon for Lawrence.

FREE BREAD FOR WEST END POOR

On Thursday next the Young Men's Aid Association will inaugurate a free bread distribution to the poor of the West End.

To avoid repeaters every applicant will be provided with a ticket beforehand, and members of the committee in charge of the distribution have already begun the task of supplying the needy with the required pasteboards.

The store at No. 54 Leverett street has been hired for the purpose, and 2,000 loaves of bread will be given away between the hours of 9 and 12.

The poor of all nationalities will be welcomed, addresses of the people will be taken whenever possible, and they will be given further assistance if upon investigation their cases prove worthy.

With the approach of Passover the society plans also a distribution of matsos, unleavened bread, prescribed by religous rites for the use of Hebrews throughout the holiday week.

At the head of the committee is A. H. Seele, and associated with him in this work are Max Hyman, secretary, J. Berg, S. Miller, and H. M. Koppel.

SAYS LEAGUE WILL NOMINATE LA FOLLETTE

Washington Paper Declares Information Caused White House Conference.

EXPECT ADDRESS TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Star said in its last edition yesterday:

"Important inside information was conveyed to the White House to-day by a prominent statesman that Senator La Follette is to be nominated for President by William R. Hearst and the Independence League, and that the speech that Mr. La Follette will make in the Senate on the Aldrich bill will really be a platform of the principles upon which he expects to go before the people of the country.

"Consequently the speech of the Wisconsin Senator will be one of unusual importance, possibly the tentative platform of a new national party. After the President had been informed as to what might be looked for in the speech of Mr. La Follette the same information was circulated to some extent in the Senate, whetting the interest that will be shown when the speech is delivered.

"The man who informed the President as to the intentions of William R. Hearst, who was recently said to be planning to nominate the President against his wishes or desires, is not posted as to whether Senator La Follette will acept the Independence League nomination and make the race. The inference is that he will do so if he doesn't secure the Republican nomination, for which he is a candidate, and probably will have the vote of his own State.

"The information as to Mr. Hearst's plans as to LaFollette comes from a man who is considered one of the best parliamentary and political generals in the country and he made the statement without qualification, asserting his confidence in his authority."

HITCHCOCK'S GIRL ACCUSER SECURES BAIL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Simultaneous with the announcement made to-day by the District Attorney that Raymond Hitchcock would again be tried on charges of felony growing out of the complaints of little girls, it was learned that Flora Whitson, or Flora Smith, whose perjured testimony caused the State's first case against him to be suddenly dropped, was released from the Tombs prison shortly after midnight.

Just who her bondsman was Magistrate Barlow, who signed the bail bond, would not say.

COMMON SENSE VS. STRONG DRUGS

Simple Oil of Wintergreen Cures Eczema and Drives Out Old Fogy Treatment.

If you were to hack your finger or scald your arm, you would apply some healing remedy as soon as possible, wouldn't you?

That would be good common sense and it would bring the quickest relief. You surely would never think of drinking medicine or doctoring the blood to cure a surface affliction.

It's just the same principle with diseases of the skin. Eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum and barber's itch can be cured and cured easily if you strike right at the trouble as you do with a cut or burn.

The cause of itching, burning skin diseases according to modern science, is a germ which feeds upon the weaker parts of the skin. To kill these skin bacilli which produce the itching sores and ugly red blotches, use the famous prescription of oil of wintergreen, glycerine and thymol, commonly known as D. D. D. Prescription. This mild liquid was advocated by a prominent skin specialist, Dr. Dennis, of Chicago, long before it was adopted generally. This liquid is called D. D. D. Prescription. It is a positive specific for all skin diseases.

McGuire Planned for an All Irish Team
RED SOX IN GAME TO-DAY

Umpire—O'Brien, formerly of the New England League.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 17.—St. Patrick's Day will be celebrated by the Red Sox this afternoon in the form of a ball game with Mike Finn's Little Rock recruits. In honor of the day Manager McGuire at first thought of putting a team in the field composed of the following players: McGuire, McHale, McConnell, McFarland, Pat Donahue, Frank Donahue, Dennie Sullivan, Carrigan, Barrett and Harris, but as President Taylor was anxious to win the game the Deacon finally decided on his regular line-up, except Laporte, who is laid up with a cut finger.

Pruitt, Harris and Cicotte will do all the pitching, while Carrigan and Pat Donahue will look after the backstop work.

Under a broiling sun yesterday the Red Sox got their hottest workout. McGuire gave them stiff sessions, morning and afternoon, and the boys were glad enough to board the trolley car when the Deacon cried "That's enough."

The old timers simply revelled in the going. Uncle Cy Young and Jesse Tannehill practiced bareheaded with the perspiration rolling off in streams. Big Joe Harris tried to take it easy, but McGuire had his eye on the pride of Melrose.

"Hey, Joe, why don't you get out and work," yelled the manager to the big fellow, who was leaning against the fence in the shade.

"I got a boil on my arm and I'm waiting for it to break," replied Harris.

The reply made something of a hit and he was allowed to rest for a while longer.

McGuire was firmly of the belief that his team of Irishmen could sweep the board with any nine that Finn might muster, and could he have gone through with enough Irish pitchers he would undoubtedly have tried the experiment.

Looks Easy for Red Sox.

Of course, the Red Sox ought to win handily from the Little Rocks, who have had only one day's practice, but such are the uncertainties of baseball that it would not be surprising if Finn's team walked off with the honors. It will all depend on the hitting of our boys, who have not found their batting eyes yet, but the chances are that the Little Rock twirlers will only lob up slow, straight balls.

President Taylor has offered to buy fish dinners for the crowd if his team wins. He figures he will just about be able to settle the bill with the gate receipts. The southern exhibition games are of little worth from a box office point of view, but they give the big leaguers good practice, and that's what they are down here for.

There were some accidents owing to the fierce practice. Charlie Wagner, who was forced to quit during morning practice on account of an injured elbow, insisted on going out to the park in the afternoon. In diving after a grounder he stuck out his bare hand and the ball taking a bad bound struck him on the middle finger nail, the nail was torn off and Wagner had to retire from the field.

Laporte went after a terrific liner which struck him on the forefinger of his right hand, splitting it on the end. Dr. Green fixed him up, but it may be necessary to take a stitch in the finger to-day.

Morgan was suffering from neuralgia in the morning and did not go to the grounds, but he took work in the afternoon. Carlisle, the swift Californian outfielder, cut out the afternoon work on account of a sore throat. Robertson, the Wheeling pitcher, has such a sore arm that he cannot use it at all. He has not pitched a ball for over a week. Tannehill and Young have advised him to have his arm baked.

Fourth of July Weather.

With these exceptions the men are in fine shape. The weather here now is of the Fourth of July variety. Lou Criger, in speaking of the condition of the team, said: "If this weather holds warm, the Boston team will be in the best shape it ever was to open the season. The only thing that troubles me is that we will run into cold weather again when we reach Cincinnati on March 30. I do not relish the two weeks that are to follow on account of the probable cold weather.

"I wish the club would cut out these exhibition games north of the Ohio River. Last year we left here in great condition, but the cold weather we struck in the north threw us back and I for one didn't touch a ball for ten days before the championship season opened in Philadelphia. I would like to see the club stay in the South up to within a day of the opening of the season."

Manager McGuire agreed with Criger and said that if he could bring President Taylor around to his way of thinking there would be no exhibition games in future north of the Ohio river. "We ought to wind up our training season in Louisville about three days before we start the American League race," said the Deacon, "I believe it would be much better for all hands and a lot of money for the owners of the club."

NOTES OF THE PLAYERS.

Jimmy Barrett went to Hot Springs on Sunday to see his wife and children, who are there. He had not returned this morning, but is expected before the game starts this afternoon.

Big Joe Harris is learning the "Knuckle Ball" under the direction of Cicotte.

Tris Speaker, who played a few games for Boston last Fall, has reported to Manager Finn of the Little Rocks. He will be in the lineup to-day.

Unglaub is suffering from a sore toe which prevents him moving around as lively as usual.

"I hope McGuire doesn't teach us too many signals," said Cy Young, "Too many are worse than not enough."

Little Ambrose McConnell will get a chance to play with the Regulars to-day as Laporte will be out of it for a week.

THONEY SAYS HE WILL JOIN TEAM THIS WEEK

CINCINNATI, March 17.—Who's afraid? Not Jack Thoney. The Fort Thomas boy has been accused, in whisper, mind you, if not having the nerve to try for a big league job, again. Nothing to it. Before the bells ring for the next Sunday service in the local churches, Thoney will have hiked west by southwest, with Little Rock, where the Boston Americans are in training, as his objective point. "I'm going after that Boston outfield job," said Thoney at Fort Thomas this afternoon. "Health or no health, I would have preferred taking another year with the minors, but, as Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission told me, that the matter rested entirely with the Red Sox, I decided to try it and join the team. I would have started before this, but I sprained my left hand boxing at the gym some days ago, and so will be compelled to nurse the hurt for a few days. However, I know it will be well enough before the end of the week to allow me to get down to real outside work, and so I'll probably start for Little Rock on Wednesday or Thursday." Thoney has been doing road and gymnasium work for the greater part of the Winter, and so will not be compelled to take any odds from the other Boston outfielders in the matter of condition.

RUSSIAN LION WRESTLES AT ARMORY A. A. TONIGHT

The champion heavyweight wrestler of the world, Hackenschmidt, will wrestle two men, Perelli and Lundin, at the Armory A. A. to-night.

Great wrestlers have visited this country at various times, but none ever earned the reputation Hackenschmidt possesses. The "Russian Lion" is marvellously strong, and has gone through the Continent for the past two years, defeating all comers. His victims number among the hundreds, and they include such men as Nouroulah, other famous Turks and Tom Jenkins.

When he meets his men on the other side it is not a question of who will be the winner, but how many falls he will score. In fact, his great strength and wonderful success on the mat have scared away many aspirants. For some time past he has found it difficult to get men to meet him, and has turned his attention to feats of strength.

Hack has a wonderful physical development. His neck is twenty-two and one-half inches around and chest measurement is fifty-nine inches.

Hack's biceps measure nineteen inches. Despite his muscular development, Hack is not the least muscle bound. He is remarkably active, although when in condition he tips the beam at about 200 pounds. He is thirty-three years old, and has been wrestling for the last twelve or thirteen years.

Friends who are acquainted with Hack and who happened to come over on the Lusitania, say that the great wrestler is very religious. He prays to keep his strength, of which, there is no doubt, he is very proud. He takes the best of care of himself, and never lets a day go by without doing more or less training.

"I am a Graeco-Roman wrestler by rights, and that is the only way I like to wrestle," says Hack, "but your best men are catch-as-catch-can men, so unless I should agree to meet them at their own style I would have trouble in getting on bouts in the tour that I intend to make while over here. Yes, I would like very much to give Jenkins another match after I get through with Gotch.

"And take it from me, I am going to defeat Mr. Gotch or quit the game forever."

KNOCKED OUT THREE MEN TO WIN MEDAL

NEW BOXING CHAMPS.

105-pound class—M. F. Shea, Cambridge.

115-pound class—William Nixon, Cambridge.

125-pound class—Joseph Murphy, Cambridge.

135-pound class—Joseph Mifflin, Cambridge.

145-pound class—William J. Rolfe, South Boston.

158-pound class—Henry Hall (colored), Boston.

Heavyweight — Jeff Madden, South Boston.

Lovers of amateur boxing had their fill at the championship bouts of the N. E. A. A. U., at Cypress Hall, Cambridge. There were thirty-seven contests in the seven classes.

The feature was the work of William Nixon, a comparative novice, of Cambridge, who knocked out Mike Manila of South Boston in two rounds, Conroy of Cambridge in three rounds, and J. McDonald of Cambridge in three rounds.

Joe Murphy, a seasoned and experienced boxer, was also a star. He won in the 125-pound class by also knocking out his three opponents.

BASEBALL RESULTS.

At Jacksonville—Brooklyn 3, Yannigans 2.
At Mobile—Athletics 4, Mobile 0.
At Savannah—Philadelphia (N. L.) 6, Savannah 5.

NEW LEAGUE WILL START SEASON MAY 2

There are six clubs in the new Atlantic Baseball Association, Lewiston, Portland, Taunton, Pawtucket, Woonsocket and Newport. The season will open May 2 and close September 7. April 1 is the date set for the schedule meeting, but two more clubs may enter before then.

Hugh McBreen will act as president and Fred Lake as secretary and treasurer. Representatives of all the cities on the circuit were present—C. L. Bedee of Lewiston, F. F. Driscoll and James H. Kelliher of Portland, D. McLean, J. F. Mack, B. M. Anthony and J. T. Allen of Newport, M. T. Carr and H. Zandager of Pawtucket, J. Leighton and John Long of Woonsocket and M. H. McDevitt of Taunton.

TEAMS JOINING LEAGUE.

The amateur baseball league which is being formed by the Shamrock A. A. is still short a few teams. The league is composed of a bunch o fast amateur teams in and around Boston and the organizers would like to hear from a few more to complete the league as soon as possible. Address all communications to Joseph M. McCabe, No. 34 Clinton street, Waltham.

PEMBROKE A. C. BOUTS.

The Pembroke A. C. will hold a smoke talk to-night with four bouts on the card as follows: Eddie Joyce of East Boston vs. Tom McCarthy of Roxbury, George Hanley vs. Pat Sullivan, Jack O'Donnell of Navy Yard vs. Kid Sweeney of Lowell, Young Taylor of Lynn vs. Curley Smith of Roxbury.

BRIGGS BESTS GOLDEN.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., March 17.—Jimmy Briggs of Boston and George Golden of Albany fought six fast rounds before the Casino Athletic Club here. Briggs had a shade the better of the encounter.

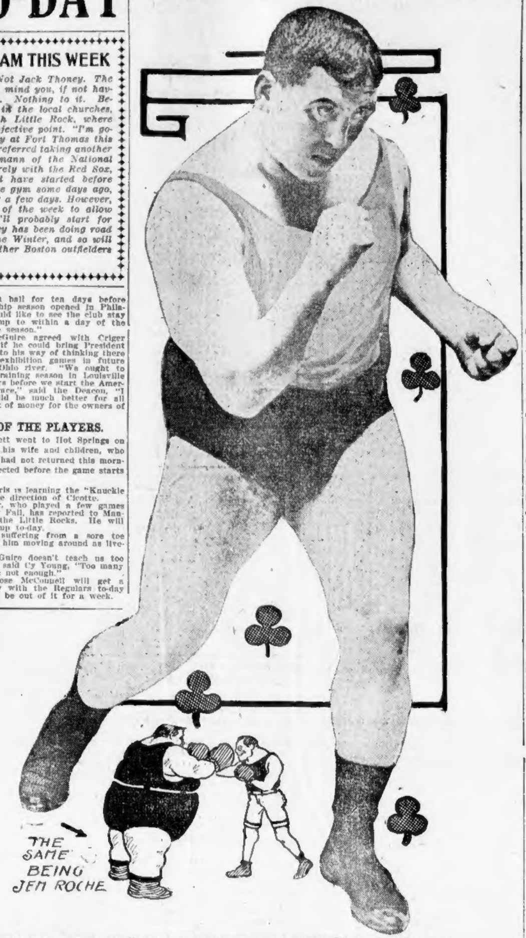
BURNS SAYS HE CAN NAME ROUND HE'LL BEAT ROCHE



THE SAME BEING JEM ROCHE

THIS IS JEM ROCHE WHO MEETS TOMMY BURNS TO-DAY.

DUBLIN, March 17.—Tommy Burns and Jem Roche meet here to-night in a twenty-round fight for a purse of $7,500 and a side bet of $2,500. There has been little betting on the fight, only a few small wagers having been recorded so far. Burns is taking all the money in sight at odds of 2 to 1, but in all it will not amount to $500.

Roche is not in the same class with Burns as a fighter and has little chance to win. He is noted for his strength, but lacks the science and cleverness of the American. Roche is the best man in Ireland at present and no doubt a large crowd will turn out to see him stack up against Burns, who has gained much notoriety since he defeated Gunner Moir and Jack Palmer in London.

Burns has worked just as hard for this fight as he would for a real championship affair, taking no chances with his condition. Some reports say that he is even in better shape for this bout than he has been in since he went abroad.

W. R. Watson will referee the contest, but it looks as though he will have little to do in that capacity. Burns figures to win as he pleases and could name the round in which to put the Irishman away.

Burns has bet $4,500 at 3 to 1 on himself and offered to put up $5,000 more at the same odds.

"Bill" Squires, the Australian heavyweight, who is advising Roche, has announced his intention of challenging the winner.

(The fight will start at 5 o'clock this afternoon, Boston time. An extra edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN will be issued as soon as the bout is over, giving complete details.)

PROVIDENCE GRAYS START GOING TODAY

PROVIDENCE, March 17.—Providence fans get into action to-day, as Manager Duffey opened up his headquarters and every day expects to hear from some of his players, who are due to report before the first of the month.

Manager Duffey needs only a pitcher and a left fielder to fill out his team and he has something in sight already for the positions. It is likely he will get some of the extra men on the Boston Americans by the time the practice is over at Little Rock.

It will be a case of hustle from now till the field is ready to get out and the preliminary season starts early next month in preparation for the first championship battle in the Eastern League, which comes April 23.

Followers of the Providence team figure that Toronto will have a harder time winning the pennant this year than last season in spite of the infusion of new blood. With Joe Kelley acting as director of the Boston Nationals the team will be without the services of the aggressive leader.

The Grays have it on some of the other teams by knowing that the positions are practically settled and there will be no need of a heavy trying out process.

CROSS STOPS MADDEN.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Leach Cross stopped Frankie Madden in the fifth round of their fight held before the Dry Dock A. C.

EX-GIANTS SHOW UP WELL AT BAT IN FIRST DAY'S PRACTICE AT AUGUSTA

BY BILL ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 17.—The Boston Nationals are knocking the ball over the lot on the warmest St. Patrick's Day that any of the Dovelites ever knew. The heat wave is holding on, and the temperature here is as hot as in Boston in July. "You can't beat this for training weather," said Manager Joe Kelly. He started right in to make his men play ball. He told them to spare their arms, but had no mercy when it came to leg work.

"Give 'em wide balls," he said to Johnny Bates, who was smashing the ball into the pasture. "Make 'em go after everything."

Joe told the pitchers to practice knocking the ball into the outfield. "That's good exercise for arms," he remarked. "It will strengthen the muscles and won't do them the harm it might if they got into the box and tried to send them over fast." Joe set an example by hustling himself.

President Dovey put on a suit and went into the field, where he got over the ground like a colt. With the boss setting the pace the hired men had to keep busy. Whenever Joe saw a player on the bench he would shout, "Hey there, Bub; there's more wood to saw."

"Give me a little ice to cut," said "Little Cy" Young. If he had been put through a wringer he would have produced enough wetness for a family washing.

Ex-Giants Are Hitting the Ball.

The New York contingent all had their eye on the ball the moment they stepped to the plate. McGann and Browne made some corking drives to the fence. Bill Sweeney, who is likely to get a try on the third sack, as no word has yet come from Brain, is a fast boy, even when in fleet company. George Graham, the Minneapolis recruit, shapes up like a real ball player.

Some of the boys ran from the grounds back to the hotel. It is more than a mile, and with the temperature above 80 it was weight-reducing work. Most of the men arrived here with very little adipose tissue to let go of.

All the pitchers had a turn in the box, but sent the ball up so slow that Graham and Ball, who were behind the bat, had no sore fingers to nurse.

In a day or two Kelly is going to set everything going at jig time.

"If you eat so much," said Jake Boultes to Dorner, when they were lunching at the hotel yesterday noon, "you'll have the nightmare."

"Tut, tut," said Gus, "there won't be anything but charley horses in this joint."

Kelly met four of his men for the first time when he arrived in Augusta. The are Graham, Sweeney, Boultes and Ball. Claude Richey has got oil wells on his Pennsylvania farm, but says no matter how high kerosene goes he will never get in the Rockefeller class.

Valdois, who played in New Bedford last season, will report to Manager Dexter of the Augusta club to-night.

The Augusta club was at work on the field when the Doves showed up for practice yesterday. The local players are a likely lot.

What Some of the Players Do.

Harry Hoffman got hit in the breast by a fast ball while posing for a photographer. "What are you using," he hollered, "a camera or cannon?"

Johnny Bates says he would play football every Fall if he wasn't afraid he might get put out of baseball by permanent injury. He carries roller skates with him. He is a rink fiend.

The New York recruits, the old Boston standbys and the other men are fraternizing like old friends. The hotel is a roost for harmony as well as for Doves.

Cecil Ferguson carries a camera, and lined up the bunch for a group picture at Charlotte, N. C., on the run to Augusta. Bill Sweeney is also an amateur photographer.

Augusta fans are getting enthusiastic over the Boston Nationals. Tom Carson of the Augusta team is a ringer for Needham.

Manager Joe Kelly of the Doves got a wire last night from the Milwaukee club, asking if he knew the address of Joe Flynn. Flynn played with Toronto last season and Montreal wanted him for this one. St. Louis got him for $1,500. Now St. Louis has sold him to Milwaukee, and the management of the latter club don't know his address. He is a Georgetown University law student.

SO. BOSTON BOY WON AT SALEM

SALEM, March 17.—Eddie Murphy of South Boston was given the decision over Denny Ryan, the Cambridge light-weight, after eight rounds of fast milling.

In the semifinal Young Burke of Lawrence won from Kid Brennan of East Boston in three rounds. It was scheduled for four, but Brennan quit.

In one preliminary, Young Burke, who was in the semifinal, knocked out Young O'Neil of Cambridge in the first round. In the second preliminary, Young Getchell of Boston got the decision over Charlie Simonds of Salem in the second round.

SMITH AND DIPPLES DRAW.

NEW YORF, March 17.—Howard Smith and Fred Dipples fought a clever six-round draw in the star bout at the Consolidated A. C. Jack Shea and Billy Smith fought six rounds to a draw.

ANSWER TO CORRESPONDENT.

A Close Observer—You are right. The game was played at San Diego.

JEFFORDS PUT TO SLEEP.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., March 17.—Jim Jeffords was knocked out by Tony Ross in the third round of a bout which was scheduled to go twelve rounds.

LEAGUE ROUTS TOWN MACHINE AT THE POLLS

Election of Two Selectmen Gives Control of North Attleboro Board.

WINS OTHER VICTORIES

NORTH ATTLEBORO, March 17.—Through the valiant work of the Independence League, the old machine, which has been in control of politics in North Attleboro for the past ten years, was put out of power in the town election held yesterday. "Honest" John Devlin, first nominated by the Independence League and indorsed subsequently by the Democrats, and John A. Rose, first nominated by the Independence League and indorsed subsequently by both Republicans and Democrats, were elected selectmen, giving them control of the Board. Devlin and Rose are both anti-machine men. The other successful candidate, William H. Bell, Republican, is a machine man.

Signal Victory.

It was the first time the League ever put a ticket in the field here and the result shows that the League drew heavier from the Republican than from the Democratic vote. The ousting of the machine from power was a signal victory, but it is enhanced by the fact that thrice before Devlin had been a candidate for selectman on the Democratic ticket, being defeated each time. Yesterday he polled 596 votes, winning easily.

Frank T. Westcott, candidate for town treasurer, first nominated by the League and afterward indorsed by the Republicans, was elected town treasurer. He polled 286 votes more than his opponent, John H. Peckham, Democrat. Westcott polled a total of 776 votes and Peckham 490 votes.

Fred A. Bartlett, for auditor, with none other than a League nomination, received 338 votes, and Charles M. Fales, for the same office, and likewise with none other than a League nomination, received 332 votes. The three men who were elected had both Democratic and Republican nominations, so that the two who ran against them were pitted singly against both parties.

Polled Big Vote.

In the vote for the School Committeemen, Dr. Ernest F. Tellier, with no other nomination than the League's, received 370 votes. Dr. A. Frank Gehrung, with no other nomination than the Independence League, polled 254. The Democrats and Republicans combined in this case and succeeded in electing their candidates by combining.

Daniel B. Hunt, Independence League candidate for constable, carried off honors by polling 490 votes. All the other candidates for the office were Democrats and Republicans. Hunt had no other indorsement. Francis M. Kingsbury, for assessor, first nominated by the League and indorsed subsequently by the Democrats, received 407 votes.

There were 1,465 votes cast in the election, which is almost a record. Dr. Devlin is the first laboring man and Catholic to be elected to the Board of Selectmen in the history of the town. Independence Leaguers are pleased at the showing of their ticket in the election. The vote carried every indication that the League is to become a powerful factor in the future politics of the town.

'SAVE MY SON,' CRIES MOTHER OF GILLETTE

Aged Woman Pleads With Gov. Hughes to Stay Hand of Executioner.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 17.Weakened by ae and almost wasted away thorugh worry, the mother of Chester Gillette, convicted murderer of "Billy" Brown, his girl sweetheart, whom he drowned in Big Mooose Lake in the Adirondacks, with fear and trembling, entered the executive chamber here to-day to make her last apepal for the life of her son.

She tottered as she crossed the great room and sank into a chair beside the Governor's desk. Her pale face twitched and every muscel in her body seemed to quiver as she leaned forward eagerly to speak to the only man who can save her son from death in the electric chair." "Save my son," she cried. The attendants turned their backs.

Every one about the capitol knew how hopeless was the mother's errand. The Governor, always judicial, had read the evidence and decisions in the case and practically had arrived at his logical opinion, which it is believed would be hard to change by personal appeal or sympathy.

He realized the difficulty of his task and he gave Mrs. Gillette a courteous reception and heard her through, listening attentively to every word and undoubtedly was affected deeply by her sorrow.

Then he told her that he would consider what she had said and she walked from the room smiling through her tears, unable to say anything to those who gathered about her, so deep was her emotion. She hurriedly left the capitol. She left papers wit hthe Governor which he will go over carefully.

Gillette is in Auburn prison under sentence to die week after next.

Years of experience and study have shown us how to improve the best product of the still.

ROXBURY HIBERNIANS CELEBRATE TONIGHT

With songs and story, together with a ture by National Organizer George H. eehan, editor of the Boston Hibernian, members of Division No. 9, Ancient der of Hibernians, will commemorate the anniversary of St. Patrick, the apostle of Ireland, in Tammany Hall, No. 172 Hampden street, this evening.

Alderman James M. Curley, the president of the division, has arranged for a long list of talent, including some of the vaudeville artists now appearing in Boston theatres.

Today's Lesson in The American's Course for Salespeople

No. 10

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Every customer who comes to your counter is really a lesson. The "fussy" one may be a lesson in self-control, yet also an education, for instance:

A lady had bought silk for a dress and was looking at trimmings. The dress was to be made rather elaborately and required a lot of ornamentation. The lady was either very particular, or did not have a definite idea of what she wanted.

The saleswoman who waited on the lady for the trimmings spent just one hour and a half. At times the clerk's patience was nearly exhausted. She answered several hundred questions regarding this and that braid, ornament, lace or button.

But after the sale was completed it was a fairly good-sized one, and the saleswoman herself admitted she did not know she knew nearly so much about the stock as she found out she knew when that customer was quizzing her.

Customers like this are a good training. KEEP POSTED so that you are able to cope with difficult ones.

The "hard" customer to sell to is developing you in points that you can USE AGAIN TO ADVANTAGE when the same kind of a customer comes around again.

To a disagreeable customer always show the pleasantest side of your nature. And so on day by day you will find when closing time comes you have accomplished much in training yourself for a broader sphere of usefulness.

Next Lesson in Thursday's American.

Cut out these "lessons." Every Sunday we print a review and self-examination. A good plan is to clip the lessons and reviews out and paste them in a scrapbook. You will then have a manual on salesmanship that you could not buy for a good many dollars. It may be worth hundreds to you in increased salary.

THOUSANDS CHEER PENINSULA PARADE

At the noon hour the big bells on all of the South Boston public schools began again to ring, and the bells in the schools of Dorchester soon took up the strain. Great guns again thundered salutes and the children left their day's studies for a great half holiday.

All day open-house was kept in South Boston for Evacuation Day and St. Patrick's Day, combined, is the great day of the year in that section of the city. Family reunions innumerable were held and grown-up children and their children today surrounded the family table in many a South Boston home.

Every in-coming train brought its quota of merrymakers and home-comers and the electric cars bound to South Boston were packed from late last night until long after the noon hour to-day with returning pilgrims.

Dinners were hastily dispatched, and soon the streets, crowded all of the morning, became densely packed this afternoon as the hour of the great pageant, the military and civic parade in honor of Evacuation Day, drew near.

Starts from Andrew Square

Chief Marshal Michael F. Smart, lieutenant of Company B, Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, with his glittering staff, mounted on fiery and prancing chargers, were at Andrew square long before the actual time of the starting of the great parade.

All around the square was a dense crowd of citizens. It was an orderly crowd, too, and while the police arrangements were perfect, the bluecoated guardians of the peace were not called upon to exert themselves to any remarkable extent.

At a meeting of the Evacuation Day committee yesterday afternoon the route of the great parade was changed. It was changed so that Andrew square was to be the central point from which the different divisions of the parade formed.

The new route of the parade as decided by the committee was as follows: Formation at Andrew square at 1:45 o'clock. Guests of honor arrive at 2 o'clock and start of parade. From Andrew square to Dorchester street, Dorchester street to East Fourth, to G street, Thomas park to East Sixth street, H street Fourth street, I street to Sixth street, K Fourth and L streets to Broadway, to Dorchester avenue and disband.

General Duval, his aides, Lieutenant-Governor Draper, Mayor Hibbard, city officials and officials of the South Boston citizens' committees reviewed the parade from a reviewing stand at E street and the chief marshal and staff at A and Broadway.

Formation of Parade.

The formation of the parade follows:

Platoon of police.

A WHITE ELEPHANT AND HER HUSBAND

The Happiness of the Family Is Often Dispelled by Fat Disease.

To have a waddling, whopping big wife is of course a misfortune for any ordinary man, but it is more of a misfortune to the waddling wife. Though she may be caged up in her own house most of the time, ashamed to go out of doors, the ridicule she suffers on the street is nothing compared to the suffocating whew-agony she undergoes when she has to do her housework, unless she is fortunate enough, of course, to have a servant.

To have to grunt and toddle upstairs and then grunt and toddle down again, a dozen times a day, to have to stump around the house all day, eternally doing something, and not be able to sit down and draw an easy breath, and then when night comes to have to short step around in a hurry and wind up the duties of the day, is a terrific wear upon any one, more so for a woman.

Such a condition is simply insufferable. Couple with it all the loss of beauty and a lovely form, which is dear to every woman, the dangling flesh from cheek and chin that makes the very air seem heavy, the fat-squeeze at the lungs that smothers the breath, and the fat-clutch at the heart, it certainly does seem as though there were no more severe affliction to bear in life.

The home seems lop-sided, with a heavy, ponderous wife, or an elephant husband, trying to wheel around and make the happy lightweights believe that they are not at all in the way. It is misery trying to make other people believe you are happy and well. It is often the forced smile which burns the heart to ashes. No one likes fat, and even members of your own family must naturally feel a repugnance to you.

It can all end by using Rengo for a little while. Pound by pound will begin to drop away, melt away, vanish, safely and surely. "I haven't had to change my ways, my eating or my habits, and the flesh is going away just the same," you will say to yourself with the most intense satisfaction, after beginning to eat Rengo. The one who doubts this will still be fat years after the man who believes it and who uses this remarkable fruit fat cure, Rengo.

There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo. For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full sized box, or by mail prepaid, by The Rengo Co., 3,212 Rengo Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The company will gladly send you a trial package free by mail, if you write them direct to Detroit; no free packages at drug stores.

For sale in Boston by Jaynes Drug Co., five stores; Henry Siegel Co., Washington and Essex streets.

Mirandy on a Great Invention

By Dorothy Dix

"HIT'S funny," observed Mirandy, "how easy 'tis to to git up a disputation in de fambly circle. When you meets up wid strangers you promulgates yo' opinions an' dey listens to 'em lak ole man Solomon was a-holdin' forth, an' dey prognosticates deir views, an' you say dat dem sho'ly am words of wisdom, an' everything is des as peaceful an' ca'm as a May mornin.'

"But at home everybody is got hay on deir horns, an' des' achin' for a scrap, an' de minute you makes a few reasonable observations dey jumps on you wid bofe feet, an' de fust news you knows de crockery is a flyin' in de air, an' de neighbors next door is a poundin' on de wall a-threatenin' to call de perlice.

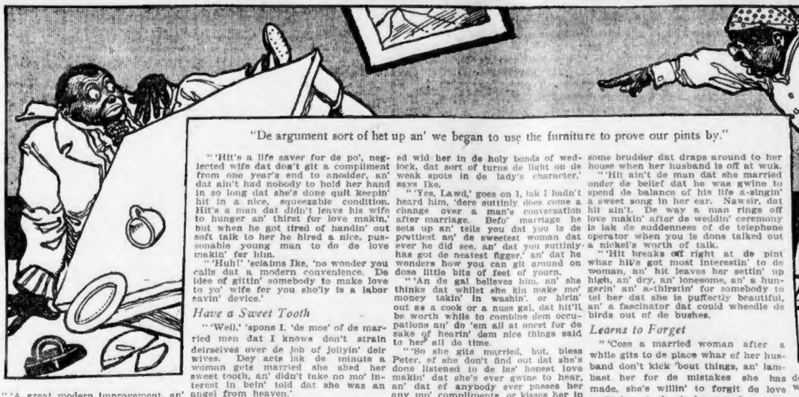
"I Ain't a Worm"

"Yassum, dat's de way things goes at we all's house, an' hit's got so now dat I dasn't scarcely mention de state of de weather onless I'se got a flat iron handy, fer whilst I is a patient an' a mild mannered woman, wid a sweet disposition, ef I does say hit myself, I ain't a worm to be trod on, an' I ain't a-gwine to take no back talk from a man, mo' specially ef he's my husband.

"What makes me say whut I does is dis: De odder night Ma'y Jane was a-readin' in de paper 'bout a man whut hired a man for twenty-five dollars a week to make love to his wife, an' I sort of give a meanful look over at Ike, an' remarked:

"'Bless Gord for dat!"

"'Whut's dat?' axes Ike.



"De argument sort of het up an' we began to use the furniture to prove our pints by."

"'A great modern improvement, an' one dat sho'ly was needed,' answers I.

"'Well, whut is hit?' inquires Ike.

"'Hit's a life saver for de po', neglected wife dat don't git a compliment from one year's end to anodder, an' dat ain't had nobody to hold her hand in so long dat she's done quit keepin' hit in a nice, squeezable condition. Hit's a man dat didn't leave his wife to hunger an' thirst for love makin,' but when he got tired of handin' out soft talk to her he hired a nice, pussonable young man to do de love makin' fer him.

"'Huh!' 'sclaims Ike, 'no wonder you calls dat a modern convenience. De idee of gittin' somebody to make love to yo' wife fer you sho'ly is a labor savin' device.'

Have a Sweet Tooth

"'Well,' 'spons I, 'de mos' of de married men dat I knows don't strain deirselves over de job of jollyin' deir wives. Dey acts lak de minute a woman gets married she shed her sweet tooth, an' didn't take no mo' interest in bein' told dat she was an angel from heaven.'

"'A man ain't got de nerve to say dat to a woman after he gits acquainted wid her in de holy bonds of wedlock, dat sort of turns de light on de weak spots in de lady's character,' says Ike.

"'Yes, Lawd,' goes on I, lak I hadn't heard him, 'dere suttinly does come a change over a man's conversation after marriage. Befo' marriage he sets up an' tells you dat you is de prettiest an' de sweetest woman dat ever he did see, an' dat you suttinly has got de neatest figger,' an' dat he wonders how you can git around on dose little bits of feet of yourn.

"'An de gal believes him, an' she thinks dat whilst she kin make mo' money takin' in washin', or hirin' out as a cook or a nuss gal, dat hit'll be worth while to combine dem occupations an' do 'em all at oncet for de sake of hearin' dem nice things said to her all de time.

"'So she gits married, but, bless Peter, ef she don't find out dat she's done listened to de las' honest love makin' dat she's ever gwine to hear, an' dat ef anybody ever passes her any mo' compliments, or kisses her in de dark, or hangs on to her hand under de kiver of a hymn book, hit's some brudder dat draps around to her house when her husband is off at wuk.

"'Hit ain't de man dat she married onder de belief dat he was gwine to spend de balance of his life a-singin' a sweet song in her ear. Nawsir, dat hit ain't. De way a man rings off love makin' after de weddin' ceremony is lak de suddenness of de telephone operator when you is done talked out a nickel's worth of talk.

"'Hit breaks off right at de pint whar hit's got most interestin' to de woman, an' hit leaves her settin' up high, an' dry, an' lonesome, an' a hungerin' an' a-thirstin' for somebody to tel her dat she is puffectly beautiful, an' a fascinator dat could wheedle de birds out of de bushes.

Learns to Forget

"'Cose a married woman after a while gits to de place whar ef her husband don't kick 'bout things, an' lambast her for de mistakes she has made, she's willin' to forgit de love makin', an' thank heaven for small favors; but befo' she gits dar she's done shed a barrel of tears by the wayside.

"'She's done wept becaze when she's mos' sewed herself to death makin' a new gown, an' spent a hour pompadourin' her hair, when her husband comes home all dat he says is: "Is de pork chops done an' dinner ready?"

"'An' den she sort of sidles up to him an' says, "Don't you lak my new frock?" and he 'sponds. "Woman, you sho'ly is gwine to break me up wid yo' extravagance," instead of tellin' her lak he oncet did dat blue was de becominest color to her, an' dat she looked lak a sheriff in hit.

"'An' dat's de reason dat dis heah plan for a man farmin' out his love makin' to his wife to some odder man whut's got a glib tongue is a great modern improvement. It supplies a long felt want, as de lightnin' rod advertisements say.

"'Maybe after dis dere won't be so many women hangin' around de preachers an' de doctors—de onliest men dat hit was money in deir pockets to flatter fat, gray-haired ole married women dat wouldn't have heard a compliment oncet a year except dat dey run to chu'ch or played sick.'

Not Blaming Men

"'Well,' 'spons Ike, 'I ain't a-blamin' men for sort of lettin' up on love makin to deir wives. Hit's moughty romantic to kiss a gal dat's got one little chin, but when a woman is got three chins hit's sort of a government job.'

"An' wid dat—though Ike explained afterward, when we done cleaned things up an' swept up de broken chainy, dat he didn't have no personal references—de argument sort of het up an' we began to use the furniture to prove our pints by. An' dat's what makes me say dat hit looks lak you can't have any ca'm discussion in de fambly circle."

A Sure Way to Win the Heart's Desire

By Beatrice Fairfax

Oh, that we two lay sleeping
Under the churchyard sod,
With our limbs at rest on the quiet earth's breast
And our souls at home with God!
—Kingsley.

IF we could one and all have our heart's desire, what a sad jumble we would make of this dear old world.

Fortunately for us, a wisdom infinitely greater than our own orders it otherwise.

Sometimes when we grow faint and weary by the wayside it seems as though living were hardly worth the effort, and all because of one thing denied us.

Or perhaps it may be that we have had our heart's desire and it has been taken away from us. The longing and the loneliness and the helpless rebellion are even more keen.

But think how much more blessed those are who have known love's sweetness, if only for a little while, than those who go through life and never have it!

It may be that the one you loved has slipped away to the great beyond, or it may be that love has grown cold.

In either case the suffering is acute, intense, and for a while the longing to creep away and hide your bruised heart can hardly be borne.

Worst of Heartaches

TO know that never again can you feel the close clasp of that dear vanished hand, or to know that the love that was once yours alone has been given into another's keeping—can any heartache be worse than that?

If death has laid its blighting hand on your happiness, the one longing at first is to go, too. All the zest and sweetness have gone out of life, and the one desire is to slip into oblivion where the longing and loneliness may cease.

But when the love that you once knew all the sweetness of has been given to some one else there is a smart and soreness to it that nothing can dull. The hideous, gnawing jealousy leaves you not one moment's peace.

If one could only realize that "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning!"

But we don't want to be comforted; we just want to suffer, suffer, suffer, until, worn out with mental agony, we reach apathy.

Heals All Wounds

AFTER we have sounded the very depths of woe dear Mother Nature lays her blessed balm on the wound, and unconsciously we begin to live again.

No matter how great our sorrow, there is still much in life for all of us. Just because the best thing has gone out of our lives we cannot mourn forever.

The world is still a beautiful world, and there is much sunshine if we look for it.

Take up your burden cheerfully and bravely. Let your experience make you very gentle toward the sorrows of others.

It is cowardly to give up the fight simply because your heart's desire is denied you.

Fight the good fight and make something out of your life. Who knows but there may still be much joy and great blessings in store for you?

MAKE BROWS REGULAR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me what I can do for irregular eyebrows to make them more regular; also how I can promote the growth of the lashes?

G. E. A.

YOU can pull out the refractory hairs with a pair of tweezers or you can have them removed by electricity. Use vaseline as an eyelash grower, applying it with a tiny camel's hair brush and being careful not to get any of it into the eyes.

The Manicure Lady on the Hard Times

By William F. Kirk

"GEORGE," said the Manicure Lady, "would you like to buy a yacht?"

"I'm saving up now," said the Head Barber. "But I hate to buy a new one when I can get one second hand, and the second-hand boats is scarce, like hens' molars or flies in February."

"That's where you are wrong," said the Manicure Lady. "I was reading in the paper this morning, coming down in the Subway, about the Vanderbilts and Goulds selling their boats, or offering them for sale, owing to the hard times. The paper says that $4,000,000 worth of nice, ocean-going yachts is now on the market. Now is your chance—go after it!"

The Head Barber smiled sadly. "If the Vanderbilts and the Goulds can't afford to keep their yachts, what chance has a humble barber got? Why do you suppose they are selling their boats?"

"Hard times," said the Manicure Lady. "Hard times, George. I s'pose the Vanderbilts is selling theirs to grab enough coin to fit up that dear old Hungarian castle where little Gladys is going to live in sombre splendor, like Bertha Clay says. I don't know why the Goulds is selling theirs, but I bet right now the coin don't go to Count Boni Castaway."

Pity the Poor Cousin!

"IT'S tough when folks has to sell their furniture," mused the Head Barber. "I had a cousin that lived over in Brooklyn a few years ago. He had a swell job as paying teller in a Brooklyn bank, but he got to playing the bank roll on Roseben in the dark and gloomy days when Davy Johnson was trying to make Roseben something better and nobler than a six furlong sprinter.

"First my cousin sold a davenport sofa, then a Chippendale cuspidor, then his wife's new Easter hat! Then, sinking lower and lower into the depths of degradation, he moved to Flatbush. He died there."

The Manicure Lady shuddered. "It is pitiful, ain't it?" said she. "Wilfred is going to sell his guitar, too. Poor brother! how he did love that there guitar! You know, George, Wilfred always made up his poems while he was playing the guitar, and I guess that's what makes them so musical. I'm afraid if he sells the guitar he won't be able to write no more verses."

Challenge for Wilfred

"IF I was sure of that," declared the Head Barber, "I would buy the guitar myself. I get mighty sick of your spouting them poems he writes. I could write a better poem with a hot towel than your brother can write with his pen."

The Manicure Lady sneered. "I never seen you showing any literary talent," she said. "If you could write like my brother do you suppose you would be here?"

"No," replied the Head Barber. "They wouldn't let me stay. But any time you think I ain't the warbling kid, give a listen to this:

"Behold the poor old millionaire
He hasn't got his street-car fare:
The doors of all the banks are latched
And so he has to sell his yacht."

"That doesn't listen so bad," admitted the Manicure Lady, but you ain't in Wilfred's class. And leaving that out, George, don't you think it is kind of pathetic to think of all them poor rich men having to give up the pretty ships in which they sailed the blue Mediterranean, looking up at the fleecy clouds and down at the sparkling waves?"

"Maybe they will be better off without them yachts," said the Head Barber. "Lots of divorces is started on yachts. There's lots of deviltry and mischief on yachts, and always has been. That's why they call a ship 'she.'"

Man Has to Pay

"THE women would be all right," snapped back the Manicure Lady, "if they ever had a chance to live the way they want to live. It's the men that makes all the trouble that starts in this world."

"Yes," returned the Head Barber, "and all the trouble they make they have to dig down and pay for."

"Let's not scrap, George," said the Manicure Lady, "even if times is hard and customers scarce. You and me has always been good friends, and I hate to alter our relations."

"The only relation you ought to alter is that brother Wilfred you are always talking about," asserted the Head Barber. "I hope he sells his guitar."

"I hate to see him part with his beloved guitar," sobbed the Manicure Lady. "You just ought to hear him, along in the cool of the evening, singing 'The Spanish Cavalier Stood in His Retreat.' How can he spare his guitar?"

"He needn't do that," suggested the Head Barber. "Why can't he find a good customer somewhere and throw himself in with the guitar?"

BOSTON AMERICAN DAILY SHORT STORY

THE LADY CLERK

By Douglas Walshe

THERE weren't many prettier lady clerks than Lucy Raindom to be seen in the city. Lucy, neatly and tastefully dressed, with gold-brown hair, a pair of pathetic, big, blue eyes, and the daintiest little square-set chin that ever hinted that it was not advisable to stir her anger.

As for Donald Hayes, he fell madly in love with her almost at sight, and from the first constituted himself her humble slave, sheltering her as much as possible and telling her all those little things and putting her up to all those little office wrinkles the ignorance of which makes a new place so uncomfortable at the beginning.

Now, in that office, as in most offices, there was a manager—Mr. Maynard—an evil-tempered man who knew his work, but who unfortunately had the notion that the only way to make people efficient was to bully them. Even Lucy's big blue eyes could not control him to keep his tongue; time and again he spoke to her in a way that galled her proud spirit almost beyond endurance, and caused Master Donald, at his desk near by, to clench his hands and bite his lips.

And one morning he turned up in an even worse temper than usual, called Donald a "lazy brute," and then began to dictate his letters to Lucy at a furious pace.

"I beg your pardon," she said at last, having struggled vainly to keep up.

"Go on!" he cried. "Don't interrupt."

"But I cannot get it down. You are going too fast for me," she exclaimed.

"Confound it all!" he blurted out. "What sort of a shorthand clerk do you call yourself? It's your business to get it down!"

In Revolt

"I was doing my best, Mr. Maynard," she answered meekly.

"Rubbish," he snorted. "You're incompetent—that's what it is."

"It isn't," said Lucy defiantly, nettled by his tone. "I can do a hundred and ten words a minute, as I told you when I came."

"You impertinent little minx," blustered the manager, getting up angrily from his chair. "Don't back-answer me. If you do, you'll precious soon find yourself outside!"

"That's where you ought to be, you bully," came in a hard, stern voice from the neighborhood of Donald's desk.

"What?" cried the manager, swinging round in furious surprise.

"I said that's where you ought to be, you bully," repeated Donald, calmly. "You've no right to talk to a lady like that," he went on, while the manager struggled in vain for speech. "I'm sure the Governor would not stand it, if he knew. It's a pity Mr. Cartwright is so old he can't come here more often and look after you!"

"Are you mad or drunk—you fool!" he stormed, "to talk to me like this?"

"Neither," said Donald, still in the same low voice, "only utterly disgusted with your ungentlemanly behavior!"

The manager looked at him, controlled himself with a mighty effort and said thickly: "Very well. Take a week's notice," and turned on his heel.

"Come along, Miss Raindom," he added. "Get on with your work. Don't sit there staring like a little fool!"

But Lucy, who had sat dumfounded through this scene, made no effort to take up her pencil again. Proud as she was of Donald for championing her cause, nevertheless her little heart was heavy. Had he not lost his place?

"Mr. Maynard," she said conciliatingly, "are we not all rather cross and hasty this morning? Won't you take back the notice you have given Mr. Hayes?"

"Impudence"

"Confound your impudence, no!" the manager snapped.

The little square chin shot forward a bit, and a sudden gleam came into the big blue eyes.

"Mr. Maynard," she said firmly, "I really think you ought to, you know!"

"Do you? And what right have you to dictate to me, miss? Take a week's notice yourself!"

The gleam in the big, blue eyes became a blaze; the lion's tail was twisted now and the lion was awake.

"Mr. Maynard," said Lucy, rising and facing him, "you have been abominably rude to me and you've had your chance to make amends and thrown it away."

And hastily pinning on her hat—while the manager watched her vaguely frightened in spite of himself—she walked out of the office.

Very disconsolately Donald went out to lunch. It was not likely, he knew, that the manager would change his mind, for Mr. Maynard was one of these weak obstinates who boast that what they say they stick to. In a week's time he would be scanning the advertisements and tramping all London in search of a place.

But it was not that which caused his step to lag. He had no regrets; to him it seemed impossible that anyone worthy of the name of a man could have acted otherwise.

His only trouble was that he greatly feared he had lost Lucy. She had walked out of the office in a righteous wrath—and he did not know her address. So far their intercourse had been confined wholly to office life; he had not dared to speak the words which for weeks had been trembling on his lips.

And now she was gone—gone for good—and since it was not to be expected that she should write to him first his only hope of ever seeing her again was to meet her by chance.

But as he entered the restaurant at which they often lunched together his eyes brightened and the wrinkles fled from his brows as if by magic. There was Lucy sitting at the usual table—waiting for him.

"I came in here to cool down, and as it was nearly lunch time I thought I would wait to thank you," she explained.

"I'm awfully glad you did," he cried. "I was in a most dreadful stew because I did not know your address, and thought I should never see you again."

"Did you want to see me again, then?" she asked innocently.

A blush was upon her dainty cheeks and her eyes were cast down on her plate.

"You know I did!" he answered feverishly.

"Oh, Lucy, I love you!" and then the waitress came up and asked for his order.

"I ought not to have spoken," he went on when the girl had gone. "I know I shall be out of a place next week, but I must say it! I must say it! Lucy, I love you!"

"And I love you, Donald," she whispered back so low that a waitress who passed quite close to them just then never caught the words. But Donald did.

There was no Lucy for whom he could lift the cover of the typewriter next morning or at whom he could smile furtively as the bad-tempered Mr. Maynard hurried in, but Donald had his compensations. He had his memories—memories of five sweet whispered words, of a hastily snatched kiss a little later.

The manager had no time to bully that morning; he had barely taken off his coat and hat before the bell rang twice from the principal's room—one ring for Mr. Maynard, two rings for Mr. Hayes.

Both men were astonished, for neither had known that anybody was in the private office, and "the governor" had never arrived so early before in all their experience. However, the summons was unmistakable, so both went in together.

And on the threshold both paused amazed. Seated at the governor's desk was not the white-haired, infirm, old Mr. Cartwright, but Lucy Raindom, the clerk who had walked out of the office yesterday morning.

"Lucy," cried Donald, hardly able to believe his eyes.

A Surprise!

"What is the meaning of this, madam?" began the manager in his customary hectoring manner, but Lucy cut him short.

"Listen and I will tell you," she said calmly. "My father Mr. Cartwright, is very old and very ill. For a long time it had been a dream of mine to learn all about his business and relieve him from the worry of it, so I came here, under my mother's name, to start at the bottom and get a thorough grounding in all the details from the lowest to the highest. And that, Mr. Maynard, is how I found you out. Not knowing who I was you bullied me as you have bullied my father's employes for years, and you forced me, by your disgraceful conduct, to reveal myself earlier than I intended.

"My father has now placed his business entirely in my hands, and I certainly cannot on any account keep such a bully as you in my employ. You sacked me yesterday, I sack you to-day. Here is a check—you will see that my father has treated you most generously—and my orders to you are that you leave this office for good in five minutes' time.

"As for you, Donald," she went on when the deposed manager, after having vainly tried to find words to meet the unexpected situation, had slunk silently out of the room. "You, of course, as we arranged last night, will be my partner."

"But—but that, Lucy," he stammered, "that was another kind of partnership. Our positions are very different now. I am only a humble clerk and you—you—"

"Poor Donald," she laughed tenderly. "Love levels everything. You loved me as a clerk and you'll just have to go on loving me, so there!"

Cook Book Free For Choice Recipes

THE writer of every recipe printed below receives a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN Economy Cook Book, a substantial indexed blankbook of 120 pages, bound in heavy oilcloth, especially designed to preserve these recipe gems in permanent form. Address Economy Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

CREAMED HADDOCK

TAKE one medium-sized onion and boil until nearly soft. Have your fish cut in small slices and cook with onion until done. Salt and pepper to taste. Put on one cup of milk in a pan and when hot add two tablespoons of butter with the same amount of flour rubbed together and put in the milk. Stir until smooth and creamy. This is very nice with mashed potatoes.

WHIPPED CREAM PIE

BAKE two shells as for ordinary cream pie. Whip a half pint of cream until stiff. To this add a tablespoon of powdered sugar, half a teaspoon vanilla and two tablespoons of cocoa. Spread between layers and on top of pie. Slice an orange and cut each slice in four and arrange on top of cream. This is very nice.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

PROPER, NOT CUSTOMARY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper to announce through the papers that an engagement is broken, as both parties find that it is absolutely impossible, under certain circumstances, to agree to be married and if presents should be returned to friends?

ANXIOUS.

THERE is nothing wrong in announcing the breaking of the engagement in the papers, but it is not customary. News of that kind travels fast, and all your friends will know it soon enough. The presents should be returned.

ENGAGED NINE TIMES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl eighteen years old, and I am keeping company with a young man of the same age. I have been engaged to this young man about nine times, and each time he has broken it. Now, what I want to know is: Am I foolish to accept him so many times; also, has he a right to ask me again to be his wife? He has at present no work, but when he does work he gets $18 a week. Is that enough to keep house on? He has no house furnishings, nor has he any money to buy them (as he spends every penny he makes), but he says when we are married we can either get our furniture on time or else live in a furnished room, but my mother objects to both.

FLORA.

HOW can you possibly have anything more to do with a man who has broken the engagement so often. He simply breaks and renews it to suit himself. Be a woman and break it yourself, once and for all time. You are wasting the best time of your life on a good-for-nothing young man.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS

IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

AT VORENBERG'S CLOTHING house on Washington street they have a new line of boys' golf and Eton caps in light and dark scotches, worsteds and cheviots, made with unbreakable vizor and all silk lined, that they will sell on Wednesday for 39 cents as a "special." These are the regular 50-cent caps, and will be on sale at this reduced price for one day only.

IN THE JEWELRY DEPARTMENT OF James A. Houston Co.'s they will place on sale Wednesday a lot of Doran collar pins for only 20 cents a set. They are good size, in Roman finish, with plain or neat beaded pattern edge, and have the new lock clasp. These pins have never sold for less than 29 cents a set, and are considered good values at that.

TO-MORROW AT MacDonnell's Tremont Temple Store they will place on sale for one day at $1.37 a lot of men's castor gloves that have been selling for $2. These are beautiful gloves for the money. They are silk-lined, and may be had in tan and grey shades. The sizes run from 7 to 9.

A BARGAIN IN A WELLESLEY SHOPPING bag will be found at Wolf's, "My Clothier." They will reduce to 39 cents for a one-day's sale a lot of their regular 50-cent goods. These are all new bags, well lined, good size, and ought to sell quickly.

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO GET A bargain in bath towels, you will find a lot in the basement of Gilchrist Company's store to-morrow that have been reduced from 25 cents to 18 cents. They are the extra large, heavy bleached Turkish bath towel, all perfect goods, and at this price are real bargains.

AN ASSORTMENT OF ODD waists in white and ecru laces, black and colored messalines and taffetas, and some hand-embroidered white China silks will be on sale at Shepard Norwell's for $2.79. These waists have been reduced from different prices from $5 up to $7.50 and are really very good values at the price.

FILENE'S WILL OFFER FOR ONLY $1.29 a lot of plain tailored house dresses made of blue and gray chambray that formerly sold for $1.85; also a special lot of beautiful little batiste lingerie princess dresses suitable for street or party wear that have been reduced from $10.95 to sell for $7.50. These lingerie dresses are daintily trimmed with combination of val and filet laces, heavy medallions and narrow cluny beading. They may be had in white, pink, blue and biscuit color.

A NEW LOT OF HORN-BACK ALLIGATOR grain leather handbags that ordinarily sell for $1 will be on sale at Vorenberg's Novelty Store on Winter street to-morrow for 69 cents. They have eight-inch frames, well lined and contain coin purse to match, with Vienna leather handles and gilt trimmings. These bags ought to sell quickly at this price. They are good values.

BIG VARIETY OF PARISIAN NEW STYLES

R. H. White Co. Makes Record-Breaking Millinery Display.

To-day and to-morrow in R. H. White Co.'s great second floor millinery parlors can be seen the results of months, yes, years of planning and preparation for this Spring's new millinery. The new Paris models, but just landed, are displayed in greater variety than ever before and are more handsome and decidedly stylish than any previous creations.

Among the celebrated French artists who have contributed to this authoritative fashion show are Mme. Georgette, Maison Pouyanne, Camille Roger, Def. Caroline Reboux, Maison Virot, Paul Virot and Berthe, Suzanne Blume, Ester Meyer Maison Tore, Mme. Louison, Sage and Alphonscien.

But the Paris creations are not all there is to be seen in this delightful opening display, for domestic millinery styles are rapidly becoming decided rivals for the French artists, and it is probably a fact that before many years the great style centres of America will be style arbiters of the coming fashions.

Big Variety in Style.

The styles in the new 1908 Spring millinery promises to be more varied than any previous seasons. Sizes run from the extremely large "Merry Widow" sailors to the tiniest toques and turbans, and this very wideness of style variety allows a greater field for selection and individuality, offering for every woman just the style or shape which becomes her best.

The colors include many new shades of blues and an almost infinite variety of browns and tans, including the new raffia shade, as well as reds, greens, grays, lavenders, purples—in fact, almost every shade and color will be used in some way this season.

The trimmings favor ostrich plumes, even more than any previous seasons, while wings and all kinds of fancy feathers are extravagantly displayed, with a perfect garden blooming with flowers and foliage, from the immense poppies down to the dainty forget-me-nots and iolets. The bulk of this vast array is nported direct by the R. H. White Comany.

Record-Breaking Season.

The season just closed has been for the R. I. White Company the most successful in he history of their career. Inspired with his tremendous success, they are planning o make this Spring's business increase in ven greater proportion. The managers ave but recently returned from Europe, uying the Paris models now on exhibition nd the tremendous assortment of trimnings, materials and all other millinery acessories. In fact, everything that is new nd desirable in Paris millinery has been ransmitted to the great R. H. White Comany's millinery department just as soon as hese styles appear, by the foreign reprentative, who keeps in closest touch with hat most interesting situation.

The many friends and customers of Mrs. oyes will be glad to know that she has eturned to the R. H. White Company milnery department after a seasons' absence.

WONDER CLOCK PUZZLES MANY

From 1,500 to 2,000 people daily have stopped in front of Wolf's "My Clothier" on Hanover street during the last two days and, after studying a clock "pasted" on the window, have gone away wondering what makes the hands go around.

The "works" consist of two hands made of aluminum, which weigh at the most eight ounces, and twelve numbers made of ordinary paper pasted on the window. There is nothing else. It is rightly termed "The Wonder Clock."

One man, after a careful study and a view from all angles, gave it as his opinion that the clock resembled Mayor Hibbard, the good parts were hidden. This idea was squelched by the man next him, who evidently was not of the same party, and who reminded the first gentleman that, as everything was in plain sight, it was impossible that anything was hidden. Inside the store there is a small circular, and this explains the workings of the clock somewhat.

DISMISSAL OF PASTOR STIRS UP CHURCH WAR

Rev. E. W. Hunt, Expelled for "New Thought" Preaching, Has Strong Following.

Angered at the action of the majority in voting last night to expel Rev. E. W. Hunt because of his "New Thought" preachings, nearly 100 members of the Wollaston Unitarian Society to-day threaten to disrupt the congregation by organizing a new church with the deposed minister as their pastor.

The bitterest feeling marked the meeting, at which those present voted by 110 to 58 to depose Mr. Hunt. His friends declare to-day that the meeting was packed by his enemies and that free discussion was choked off.

The Rev. Mr. Hunt, who became the object of criticism because many members thought he was preaching Christian Science in his recent sermons on "The New Religious Healing," said today to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that he had no intention of starting a new church in Wollaston.

Has Message to Preach.

"It is not my purpose to disrupt the society by forming a new religious society in Wollaston," he stated. "I have many friends, however, both in Wollaston and Boston, whose judgment I respect and value, who think I have a religious message to preach, and there are people in Boston who desire to hear it. Therefore I shall at 3 o'clock next Sunday preach in Potter Hall, New Century building, on 'The New Religious Healing.'

"What my course for the future will be I cannot say at this time."

Has Strong Support.

The congregation includes many Boston business and profesional men of wealth and prominence, and if Mr. Hunt decides to remain in Wollaston and continue what he considers a battle for freedom of conscience he will not be hampered by lack of financial support.

General Thomas R. Matthews, a Boston coffee importer, and one of those who defended Mr. Hunt at last night's meeting, is indignant at the action of the majority, which he calls directly opposed to the Unitarian principles of free speech and free thought. He said:

Against Free Speech.

"By the vote at last night's meeting, dismissing the Rev. Mr. Hunt, the Unitarian Society of Wollaston arrays itself against the fundamental principles of Unitarianism, which have already included free speech, free thought and liberal ideas.

"The issue is not between Mr. Hunt and the church; it is the church society against the elementary principles of the creed. Certainly, by their vote these members show that they are opposed to the ideas which have always animated the Unitarian pulpit. Emerson was one of the leading disciples of free thought and free speech.

"There was an evident intention last night on the part of some of those present to have the question of dissolving the pastoral relations of Mr. Hunt with the church brought to a vote without any discussion. It seemed to be the desire of a number to suppress free speech on the part of al those who stood by the pastor.

Quite a number of those who have attended the Wollaston Unitarian Church have been drawn there by the eloquent preaching of Mr. Hunt. They will no longer have any especial reason for coming to the services in the future."

Defend Former Pastor.

Among those who warmly espouse the cause of Mr. Hunt are Frederick H. Bishop, president of the Universal Winding Company of Boston, and his wife; Joseph Bartlett, son of General Charles W. Bartlet and Mrs. Bartlett; J. J. Henry, secretary of the Massachusetts Real Estae Exchange; Frank Field, the well-known Boston insurance broker; A. A. Kingsley, a Boston school teacher; Miss Helen Comins, Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Green of Milton.

To his accusers Mr. Hunt has repeatedly denied that his sermons proved him to be a Christian Scientist, and that he saw nothing in them inconsistent with the Unitarian faith.

This is by no means the first storm Mr. Hunt has had to face during his ministerial career. He was originally an Episcopalian and while rector of a church of this demonination in Lansing, Mich., he created a surprise by announcing that his conscience would not allow him to remain in that faith. At his own request he was deposed from the church and became a Unitarian.

Left Bangor Pulpit.

Just previous to coming to Wollaston he was the centre of a dissension which threatened to disrupt the Unitarian Church in Bangor, Me. Some of his wealthy parishioners charged him with Socialist leanings and objected to his accepting an invitation to address the members of a labor union. Mr. Hunt refused to cancel the date and was forced to resign.

PROBE MAINE MAN'S DEATH

WATERVILLE, Me., March 17.—Samuel Pooler, aged twenty, was found dead in bed Sunday night and the circumstances were considered sufficient to warrant an autopsy to be performed. Pooler had been making his home in the house of Moses Carey on Water street. The men occupied the same bed, and when Carey retired Sunday night, he found his room-mate dead.

Coroner Frank Redington and City Marshall Farrington ordered an examination to be made to-day and the stomach was sent to Bowdoin College to be examined.

'TRUSTY' PARDONED FOR HIS HEROISM

SMOKE-FILLED TUNNEL SCARES CROWDED TRAIN

NEW YORK, March 17.—Stalled in a subway train directly under East River, with smoke slowly seeping into the cars and making breathing difficult, a crowd of frightened Brooklyn-to-New York underground travellers had the scare of their lives early to-day, when they were held for thirty-five minutes in this position, not knowing what danger faced them and unable to prevail upon the guards to allow them to leave the cars. Three other trains were stalled between Bowling Green and the Borough Hall station, Brooklyn.

A fire at the Fulton street station, a mile above where the river train was stalled, caused the trouble. Workmen allowed a crowbar to short circuit the rails and the power went out, leaving the trains unable to move.

The woodwork started to burn, and the smoke quickly spread all through the tunnel. Firemen soon put out the fire, but it was thirty-five minutes before the trains started again.

CATCH MAN IN 2-MILE CHASE FOR BURGLAR

After an exciting two-mile chase along the railroad tracks between Quincy and Atlantic, Patrolman Riley of Quincy to-day captured Kitalain Derlinsky, a Russian, thirty-one years old, who is said to answer the description of a burglar who entered Bullock's store in Pond street, South Weymouth, early yesterday morning, and escaped after several shots had been fired at him by a policeman.

Derlinsky was seen hurrying toward the railroad tracks in Atlantic to-day and ordered by Patrolman Riley to stop. Instead he ran. The officer gave chase and finally overtook him. The man was bareheaded and there was a cut on his right hand.

In his flight the fellow threw away a blood-soaked handkerchief. He was arraigned in court for vagrancy and held for a hearing to-morrow.

EMMA GOLDMAN DRAGGED FROM STAGE BY POLICE

CHICAGO, March 17.—Emma Goldman, leader of the anarchists of this country, was dragged from the stage by the police last night just as she was about to deliver her speech on "Anarchy as It Really Is."

The scene was Workmen's Hall at Twelfth and Waller streets. Nearly three hundred persons had assembled there, more than half of them anarcists of the Edelstadt group—the same set with which young Averbach affiliated and the same hall in which he had imbibed some of his anarchistic notions.

BURIED MINERS SAVED.

GLACE BAY, N. S., March 17.—As the result of a downfall of coal in Dominion No. 6 colliery William Snow, aged twenty-five of Carbonear, N. F., was killed and William Buckley and John Donahue were seriously injured. The latter two were buried, but their comrades dug them out in time to save their lives.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

KELLY IS BESTED BY PAPKE IN FIERCE BOUT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 17.—Billy Papke of Spring Valley, Ill., was a real thunderbolt and won a terrific battle from Hugo Kelly, the Italian of Chicago, after ten rounds of milling as hard as two men could put up with.

Billy's victory was by a clear margin, though it was marred by his persistence in using his head in clinches. He was warned repeatedly by the referee but continued until he had Kelly's face a mass of cuts from which the blood was streaming throughout. Papke did not get away unpunished, however, and had Kelly not injured his right arm early in the fray there might have been another ending. Kelly claimed that he injured his arm in the second round and it was apparent to all about the ringside that something was wrong, for he did not use it throughout the rest of the contest. An examination after the contest showed that there was a small bone broken in his arm.

No Fancy Work; Real Fighting.

It was a terrific battle, just such another as these fellows put up some weeks ago. The men did not fight a pretty battle. There was no fancy work, but it was all grim battling at close quarters, in which neither man gave nor asked quarter. Throughout the greater part of the contest the men stood shoulder to shoulder and slammed away viciously.

At this infighting Papke was by far the stronger, and it was here that he did the damage with his head. He would put his head into Kelly's chin, and every time he dug toward Kelly's midsection with his fists the head went up at the same time and Kelly's face suffered.

There was one knockdown in the fight and Papke scored it. It came in the first round and when the men had been fighting only about a minute. The men had been dancing around and swinging at each other's head. Papke suddenly lashed out with an overhead right swing that caught Hugo on the cheek. Hugo went down to his knees, but was up immediately. That the blow not only startled, but hurt him was plain to be seen and he dove into a clinch. Had the punch landed just a little bit lower the battle would have ended then and there.

Towards the end of the contest Kelly changed his tactics. He had found that he could not cope with Papke at close quarters fighting. He tried to stand at long range and pick a spot to send in a punch that might win the fight. But in this he was foiled, for Billy kept right on top of his man all the time and there was no picking and chopping possible for Kelly.

Kelly Grows Weaker.

As the rounds rolled along Hugo was growing weaker, though the terrific pace did not seem to affect Papke at all. In his corner between the eighth and ninth rounds, Papke exclaimed to his seconds: "I'm going to put him out this time." And the way he started the ninth looked as if he would accomplish his purpose. He tore at Kelly like a wild man and whaled away with both hands. Kelly stood and tried to swap punches with him but was soon forced to clinch and hang on. Papke tried his best but was too wild to land the necessary punch.

The tenth was much the same. Hugo tried his best to sneak one over that would end the business, but the Spring Valley boy kept him working all the time and Hugo was glad when the bell rang.

Papke all through seemed to have little fear of Kelly. After almost every round he turned and laughed at the Italian as the latter went to his corner. During the contest he kept up a running fire of sarcasm. Once in the sixth round Billy swung a vicious right on Hugo's kidneys. The blow landed with a thud and when his glove was taken away there was an angry looking welt on Kelly's side.

"How did you like that one?" queried Papke. Here is a description of the rounds:

Fight by Rounds.

ROUND ONE—Papke was first to lead and landed right and left on Kelly's jaw, went into a clinch and wrestled around the ring. Kelly missed twice and the men clinched again and wrestled and scuffled along the ropes. Both men landed on the stomach. Papke floored Kelly with a right smash on the jaw but he was up immediately. Papke tried hard but could not reach. Kelly swung a left on Papke's face and the men clinched. Billy planted a left on the nose and a terrific right in Hugo's stomach. As the bell rang Billy turned and laughed at Kelly. Papke's round.

ROUND TWO—Papke rushed out of his corner and the men went into a clinch and both worked for the body. Billy landed a right on Hugo's face and the latter replied with three rights to Billy's body. There was a lot of clinching and roughing, both working with both hands. Papke was kidding the Italian in the clinches. Both missed several leads and in the clinch that followed the Spring Valley boy worked his loop-the-loop uppercuts without effect. The men stood toe to toe and slugged away with both hands, landing about the same number of blows. Kelly put a left to the face and they were in a clinch, whaling away at the bell. Papke's eye was cut.

Papke Warned for Butting.

ROUND THREE—Papke rushed and Kelly met him with a straight left. The men got together on the ropes and pounded away at each other's body. Papke started to butt with his head and was warned. Kelly rushed and was pounding away at the body but received a left to the face in return. They wrestled a lot. Then when they broke away they started to slug, Hugo going to a clinch. Billy rushed and Hugo worked on him at close quarters. It was a succession of clinches in which Papke was doing the better work.

ROUND FOUR—Papke rushed out of his corner and landed with a light left and they went into another clinch. Billy got his head under Kelly's chin and worked away at the body. The men wrestled around the ring and the referee was forced to part them. Papke got in a left swing that straightened Hugo up and they went into another clinch. Kelly whipped up a couple of uppercuts. Papke rushed Kelly to the ropes and landed on body and head. Billy continued to butt in the clinches. They went into a terrific rally and Kelly landed a couple of hard ones on the jaw, but they did not bother Papke, who hammered away with both hands and made Hugo stop. At the gong they were in a clinch.

Clinch After Clinch.

ROUND FIVE—They went in a long clinch and both worked to the body. Papke planted a terrific right on Kelly's ribs and Kelly held on. The men struggled away at close quarters and came out of a clinch. Papke planted a stiff left hook on Kelly's jaw. Hugo straightened Billy up with a left, but the latter rushed Kelly to the ropes and they slugged away. Papke hit Kelly on the jaw and Hugo clinched. It was one clinch after another with both men working both hands. A bump from Papke's head drew the blood on Hugo's head. It was a hard round but Papke was fresher at the end.

ROUND SIX—The men rushed out of their corners and went to close quarters, and Papke again bumped Kelly, opening another cut and covering him with blood. The men hung together and roughed it all around the ring, and as soon as the referee parted the men from a clinch they went into another, and when they did get apart they rushed together again. It was the roughest kind of fighting and began to tell on both. Each landed hard ones on the other's body, and toward the close Papke punched Kelly over the kidneys, which raised large welts. Hugo hooked Billy to the face, but it did not hurt him. It was Papke's round, and he was the stronger.

Kelly's Seconds Protest.

ROUND SEVEN—Between rounds Kelly's seconds protested against Papke butting. Billy met Kelly with a hard left and they went into their clinch, with Papke's head under Kelly's chin. Hugo received another hard welt over the short ribs. Kelly stabbed another left to the face without return. Billy swung another right to Hugo's short ribs that hurt the latter. A slugging match followed. Kelly was the first to break ground. Kelly put a left on Papke's head. The latter rushed and nearly went through the ropes when Kelly sidestepped. Kelly put a right and left on the nose with a clout to the jaw and they went into another clinch which lasted till the bell rang. Papke hit Kelly in the jaw after the bell rang.

ROUND EIGHT—The usual clinch after one lead. After they broke away they exchanged swings to the jaw and went into another clinch. Kelly tried to stay at long range, but Papke insisted on keeping close. Papke put a hard right to the kidneys. Kelly stabbed Billy three times to the face with a left, but Billy came back with a right swing to the jaw. Kelly again planted his left to the face and they went into another clinch. Both worked uppercuts, but Papke's seemed to be the cleverer. Papke's butting continued. At the bell they were in another long clinch in which Billy was doing most of the work and he was the fresher at the gong.

Papke Tries for Sleep Punch.

ROUND NINE—In his corner Papke said to his seconds: "I will put him out in this round." Papke rushed Kelly with rights and lefts on the jaw and the same sort to the body and made Kelly clinch and hold on. Papke was fighting like a wild cat and the men were shouting. Kelly put a left snap to Bill's jaw which Billy returned a moment later. Papke forced and landed several rights and lefts on the jaw which hurt Hugo considerably. However, Kelly was fighting back all the time. Kelly started a rally but hard wallops on the body made him run to a clinch. Both men were weak at the bell, but Kelly was in the worst shape.

ROUND TEN—They shook hands for the last round and at once went into a clinch, in which Billy did the more effective work. He cuffed Kelly around the ring with both hands, and Hugo hung on. Papke planted a terrific right and left in Kelly's stomach, and both men stood with heads together and whaled away. At this game Papke was by far the better. Kelly slipped in Papke's corner and came near going down, but recovered. Kelly started to rushing, but was unable to land effectively. In a clinch along the ropes Billy's body went outside the lines, and the men clinched around until extricated. Kelly fought hard trying to stem the tide. At the gong the men were both whaling away furiously, and both were badly marked when it was over.

DUNTLEY SELLS FAST TROTTER

Wilbur Duntley, secretary of the Metropolitan Driving Club, has sold to Nick Hubinger of New Haven the trotting mare Mae Heart, 2:10¼, and she will be prepared for a trip through the Grand Circuit with Alcyell, 2:06¼, by Fred Hyde.

Mae Heart was raced in the big line last year by Myron McHenry, who drove the Crabtree horses, including Sonoma Girl, 2:05¼. She was quite successful, looking like the improving kind that should be better in select society another season. At the Fasig-Tipton sale in New York last November she was bought by Mr. Duntley, who has turned a pretty penny to his bank account in picking her up for a moderate sum and selling at a good advantage.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

What You Pay for--In Pianos

You pay for material, work of construction, legitimate expenses covering rents, salesmen's salaries—all these things you must pay for in all lines—not pianos alone. In buying a piano you must avoid paying Pride Prices—that is, buying a piano on name alone. We admit that the names of makers of high-class pianos are good guarantees of value and quality, and furthermore we admit that the maker of a fine piano is entitled to a good price for his genius—musical, artistic, etc.; but in these days of fierce competition you don't have to pay too big a price for even these qualities. We go into the cold, cruel, competitive market and buy at sacrifice cash prices the best of pianos, some new and some used. They go on our sacrifice floor tagged at a price that covers nothing but hard luck and necessity. We have all makes. We play no favorites. We sell—that's all.

$5.00 Down, $1.00 a Week | 3 MONTHS' LESSONS FREE to everyone buying a Piano of us this week—the finest piano instruction possible.

The Fair Hills of Ireland

To Those Beautiful Hills, Green Fields and Pleasant Streams, Many Hearts Turn To-day

"Take a blessing from my heart to the land of my birth
And the fair Hills of Eire, O!
And to all that yet survive of Eber's tribe on earth
On the fair hills of Eire, O!
In that land so delightful the wild thrush's lay
Seems to pour a lament forth for Eire's decay—
Alas! Alas! Why pine I a thousand miles away
From the fair Hills of Eire, O!"

These beautiful lines by James Clarence Mangan will awaken sad thoughts and beautiful memories in the hearts of many.

Especially the old, born in Ireland, destined perhaps never to see that land again, will think with sadness and with longing of the beautiful land, on this day so closely associated with Ireland's history and spiritual development.

Only those that have seen the fair hills of Ireland, the beautiful waters, the simple, earnest people, the barefooted children, the little cabins, can know what the name of Ireland means to an Irish man or woman.

It is a most beautiful country, it has sheltered and developed courageous men, men of great genius, women of the finest mental and moral character. It has given to all of the world strong workers, good generals, plucky, unselfish individual fighting men, legislators, poets, orators, writers of great power.

St. Patrick in his "Confession" tells how he determined to devote himself to the far-off regions of the world, what he called "the ultimum terrae." St. Patrick felt that he was called to a distant—the most distant of all places. He tells us:

> "I thought that at that moment I heard the voices of those who dwelt beside the wood of Focluth, which is by the western sea, and thus they cried, as if with one mouth, 'We beseech thee, holy youth, to come and walk once more amongst us.'"

He went there to work with the people and for them. He and other magnificent spirits—St. Columbkille among the greatest of them—led and developed the wonderful Irish character that has been an inspiration in the world for so many centuries.

How wonderful is the world's expansion, how great the development of man and of his realm, physical and mental! St. Patrick, bound for the wood of Focluth, writes of that spot as one "ubi nemo ultra erat" (where beyond there was no man).

Since those words were written, the development of the world has ALL been BEYOND THAT POINT. West of the beautiful green island, west of the great ocean, which to St. Patrick and his day was the boundless endless sea, the real world has grown IN AMERICA.

Each man's knowledge is limited by his time, and St. Patrick's was limited by his time. But his spirit was without limit. And that spirit of courage, enterprise and sincerity is just as strong in America to-day as it was in that far past when St. Patrick preached and converted near the wood of Focluth, "where beyond there was no man."

The man with Irish blood may well look back with pride, and look ahead with confidence and ambition when he thinks of the accomplishments of that wonderful race in the past.

For Ireland is but ONE home of the great Celtic race.

When Greece was at her greatest she had got from the Celts—then dwelling north of Greece—her blue eyes, her genius for poetry and art. It was not Asiatic nor African blood that made the genius of Greece. It was the Celtic and Germanic blood of Europe. It was the wonderful Aryan race, of the cold, dark Northwest, that produced in Greece, in Rome, in France, in Spain, and that produces now in America and throughout the world forces of human development.

There are Irish names on South American battleships, there are Irish names written at the tops of the most important pages of English history, there are Irish bones under the ground on every great battlefield in this country and in the Old World. It is a wonderful race, as young to-day, as full of power, as in the old days of Greece or the comparatively modern days of St. Patrick.

A thousand times Irishmen have been beaten, BUT THEY HAVEN'T BEEN CONQUERED. A man is only conquered when HE SAYS he is conquered. England's fight against Ireland goes on, IRELAND'S FIGHT AGAINST ENGLAND GOES ON ALSO, AND IT WILL GO ON UNTIL THE FACT SHALL BE ESTABLISHED THAT THE RIGHTS AND THE GENIUS OF A SMALL HANDFUL OF MEN CAN BE EXTINGUISHED ONLY BY THEIR OWN SUBMISSION, NOT BY ANY FORCE OF NUMBERS.

The condition of Ireland is pitiful—although the Irish do not ask for pity. Under English rule taxes have been doubled, the population has been CUT IN HALF.

The fertile fields of Ireland are used to fatten cattle that are driven to the English market, and on lands less fertile, as Stephen Gwynn reminds us, the homes of Ireland produce children driven by tyranny and starvation away from those homes to this land of greater promise.

The taxes of Ireland are high, the population is low. The fat cattle of Ireland go to London, the thin, half-starved children of Ireland come to America.

But that need not spell victory for England or despair for Ireland, as long as Irish men and women keep their courage and their devotion to the old home and the race.

The hope of Ireland lies in the Irishman's devotion to his people, to his hatred of tyranny.

In this country there is growing up a greater Ireland. The day will come, let us hope, when Irish courage at home and Irish loyalty in America will make England realize, by force if necessary, otherwise if possible, that there have been enough years of famine, that there has been enough driving of the fat cattle to London and the thin children to America.

Every Irishman's thoughts turn to-day to that beautiful home across the sea. He knows of it from his father and mother, even if he hasn't seen it. The devotion of her children will free Ireland at last. Some day the men of the old race will answer WITH A FREE IRELAND the appeal of O'Connell, who stood on the hill of Tara

> "to protest against the unfounded and unjust union as not binding upon conscience, void in principle, void as a matter of right and in constitutional law."

I.: THE RANCHMAN OF THE WILD WEST.

The Ranchman (an Earl, real, The Girl, in Disguise.)
A Cowboy. A Broncho (real)

COWBOY—I am oppressed with vague forebodings. Danger threatens us from some quarter. Where is the Girl?

RANCHMAN (Earl)—Out riding on the Cross-Bar Ranch.

COWBOY—Oh, what terrible news! The young lady will certainly be exposed to grave danger in that vicinity. Red Pete, who is alleged to be a bandit, is ravaging the neighborhood.

RANCHMAN (Earl)—Gee whiz! Get the bronc.

COWBOY—Here is the animal you designate.

RANCHMAN—I will make a record dash and save the Gierul, and then she can't throw me down. [Mounting the broncho (real)]. On, on to victory! [Broncho (real) bucks and Ranchman (Earl) flies through the air and drops on the orchestra leader].

COWBOY—Dear me, that person strikes me as being a—er—in the vernacular, a tenderfoot. But I doubt if the orchestra leader thinks him tender. Ha! Ha!

III.: THE TERRORS OF THE ALPS.

The Child. The Guide.
The Hero. A Dog (real).

HERO—Ah, me; it is bitter cold in these Alps! [Two paper flakes fall on his shoulder]. Ah, it snows! Snows!

GUIDE—Ah, a terrible night!

CHILD [from behind a pillow]—Yoo-oo-ooh!

HERO—Ah, a chee-ild in distress. I will save it!

GUIDE—It would be madness to expose oneself on such a night!

HERO—I will go alone. I will save it!

GUIDE—You're a wonder. I will pray for your safe return [aside], otherwise I shall not get my wages.

HERO—Where is Fido, the faithful St. Bernard dog; he will lead me to the perishing chee-ild.

GUIDE—Here he is.

HERO—Ah, Fido; let us start on our errand of mercy. [Fido starts dragging Hero toward wings.] No, no, Fido, not there. [Aside] Hang the brute—come here—good doggie; nice Fido; nice piece of steak ready for you when you find the Child. [Fido drags actor off stage and bolts in search of food. Takes a couple of pounds off stage hand who tries to shoo him back.]

THE HALLROOM BOYS

THEY DO IT ON $13 PER

GEE PERC, WHERE ARE WE GOING TO GET THE DOUGH FOR THAT DINNER AT BILMONICO'S TO-MORROW EVENING: I'M BROKE.
SO AM I — SAY IT'S GETTING TO BE WARM WEATHER NOW. LET'S HOCK OUR OVERCOATS. WE WON'T NEED THEM NOW.
3¢ WORTH OF PEA-NUTS GOVERNOR.
1
WHAT! $7.50 FOR THE TWO! SAY THAT'S AN AWFUL SMALL AMOUNT FOR SWELL OVERCOATS LIKE THESE. SEE! THIS ONE IS SILK LINED.
NEAR SILK YOU MEAN. YES, $7.50 IS WHAT I SAID AND NO MORE
WE GOT MORE'N THAT FOR THEM LAST YEAR.
2
WHY IF THERE AREN'T THE HALL-ROOM BOYS COMING OUT OF A PAWN SHOP. I FEEL BAD FOR THEM. DON'T LET THEM SEE US. I'VE AN IDEA. LET'S GO IN AND PERHAPS WE CAN PERSUADE THE PAWNBROKER TO GIVE THEM BACK WHAT THEY HAVE PAWNED.
H—M! THEY MUST BE HARD UP.
3
WOULD YOU DO US A FAVOR AND TELL US WHAT THOSE BOYS PAWNED WHO WERE JUST IN HERE. THEY'RE FRIENDS OF OURS AND WE WOULD LIKE TO HELP THEM. THEIR OVERCOATS — MY! THEY MUST BE HARD UP. NOW WOULD YOU HAVE YOUR BOY TAKE THE OVERCOATS OUT TO THEM, AND I'LL REIMBURSE YOU WELL FOR YOUR TROUBLE
BOY!
4
HEY MISTER — THE BOSS SAID YOU BOYS COULD HAVE BACK YOUR OVERCOATS.
WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THAT! WHO SAID ALL PAWNBROKERS WERE SKINS.
ISN'T HE KIND-HEARTED. I CAN HARDLY BELIEVE IT.
3
WHY HELLO BOYS. LOVELY DAY ISN'T IT. SO MILD FOR MARCH.
I SHOULD THINK YOU WOULD FIND YOUR OVERCOATS RATHER WARM HALL ROOM.
WE WEAR THEM FOR FORMS SAKE TOO.
OH NO — BESIDES WE DON'T LIKE TO TAKE ANY CHANCES — THE WEATHER IS SO CHANGEABLE.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The Wife or Mother Who Wants to Make the Most of Herself Might Start Reading the Cook Book

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHEN a girl of fifteen ran away from school and married her lover of twenty, life seemed a romantic holiday to her.

Now, at thirty, mother of six children, with poverty at the door, romance has long since flown and love is lost in regret for vanished youth and freedom.

"I want to make something of the life before me," cries the impatient woman; "I do not care to settle down into a mere household drudge. I hate kitchen work. Anybody can cook and sweep and sew. I want to earn money to have a servant to do all that, and then I want to be somebody."

And meanwhile there is no servant in the little home, and the children and the hard-working husband live as best they may in confusion and disorder, while the mother dreams of wonderful things she wants to do in the future.

But these wonderful things will never be done until the mother lays first the foundation of a good, orderly home for her family.

Raising Obstacles

WHEN we neglect the merest duty, we make the next duty more difficult of accomplishment, and we place an obstacle between ourselves and our ambitions.

Every duty is a stair on which to mount to higher things.

Nothing a mother may ever achieve in the intellectual world can repay her children for the loss of a comfortable and decent home in childhood.

I have known an ambitious woman to save her spare pennies and purchase books on architecture and study diligently to inform her mind on the different kinds of architecture, while her children were hanging about the neighbors' doors asking for wholesome food to fill the need left by the baker's meagre supply—the only nourishment the ambitious mother gave her family.

She, too, "hated the kitchen" and desired to make something better of herself than a "mere cook."

But her children in consequence became "mere tramps," literally begging their meals from door to door.

Better remain in ignorance of the difference between the arts of Michael Angelo and Mozart than to humiliate one's own child in such a manner and deprive it of its legitimate rights—a child's first right—a decent home.

Cook Books Best Reading

THE best books a poor woman who is the mother of little children can obtain are books on hygienic cooking. The best classes she can join are settlement cooking classes, where the art of combining simple foods in a healthful and nourishing manner is taught by skilled specialists.

If such books and clases are not available, any old-fashioned cook book will serve her purposes, if she is determined to become a good cook and supply her family with palatable food.

Eugene Christian's "Raw Food" book has made robust men and women out of invalids. It is surprising how many delicious foods are to be found in nature which do not need cooking.

I saw a little child of seven years who had never tasted cooked food, and he was like a small Sandow in vigor and beautiful to behold.

But a mother wants to know how to prepare these nature foods, and it is a better study for her than art, music or literature, if she has a family of children to rear.

Besides the food question there is the subject of order for a mother to consider; order and beauty.

The poorest hovel on earth can be kept in order and made attractive if the woman who is its presiding genius is filled with a desire to make an attractive home.

Begin With Things in Reach

THE mother who told me of her hatred of drudgery and her desire to "make something" of herself told me she lived in a continual dream of beautiful things to be! She imagined palaces and lovely rooms filled with statuary and paintings.

It is well to dream of the beautiful. All beautiful realities were first dreams. But we must make a beginning with the materials at hand—before any dream can come into actual form and shape.

The mother who keeps order and teaches her children to keep order in a poor, small home—who sweeps, dusts, scours and cleans her little rooms until they suggest rest, comfort, peace and home—that mother has laid the foundation of the "palace beautiful" which fills her imagination.

Poor, little, tired mother, do not be discouraged. Make your home as beautiful and as comfortable as love and labor will permit. Keep in your heart the ideal of what you want your life to become. Never for an instant think of yourself as a "mere drudge," but always as one of love's willing workers, and believe that your heart's desire is coming to you.

It will come to you if, first of all, you do the duty that lies nearest you, and do it cheerfully.

And only in this way will it come. Only in this way can you "be somebody."

"The Finishing Touch"

(FROM THE LAWRENCE SUN.)

THE Independence League must still be reckoned with in Massachusetts politics, and quite a factor it is likely to be in the next State election. Hisgen will again be its standard bearer, and at the present time [illegible]oes not seem likely that the Democrati[illegible]rty will put forward any man who [illegible] be so strong with the people.

Mr. Whitney will not run again, and General Bartlett would not poll the full party vote. The condition of the State Democracy is well nigh hopeless, and all because of the rule or ruin policy of some of its leaders.

* * *

Should the Independence League be declared by the Supreme Court to be one of the two great parties, the finishing touch would be put on the old Democratic party in Massachusetts, and all that would be left for its friends to do would be to see that it had as decent a burial as possible.

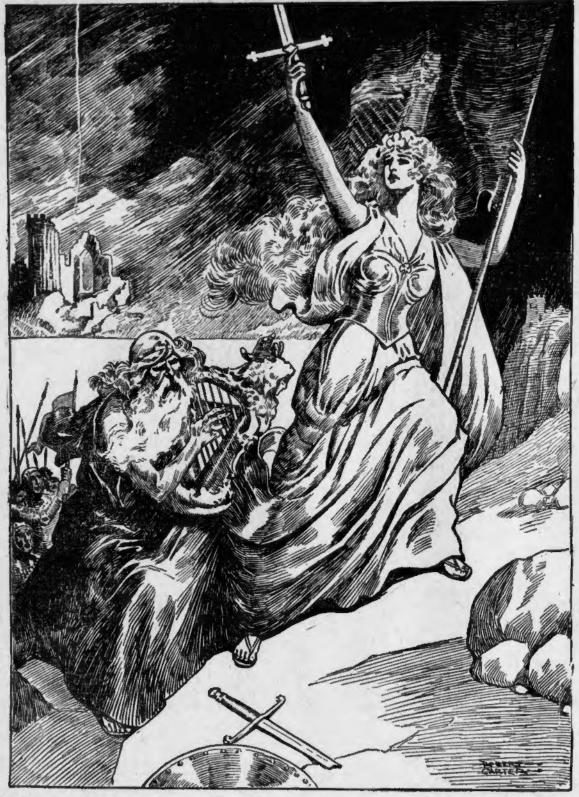
THE SPIRIT OF IRELAND



ROBERT CARTER

SPRID NÁSÚNTA NA h-ÉIREANN.

By JAMES REIDY

"The Wearin' o' the Green," which, pending the production of a national anthem, has the strongest claim to be considered the national anthem of Ireland, was written about the year 1798, and, like many of the Irish ballads of the latter part of the eighteenth century, its author's name is unknown. Probably he did not put the value on his own work that has been since accorded to it, and there was very good reason, too, why the writer of such a song as "The Wearin' o' the Green" should have hidden his identity at that time in Ireland, because, to paraphrase one of her poets, to love her then was treason; to defend her meant death, and, of course, to sing of her in a patriotic strain was dangerous, too.

The theme and the inspiration were furnished by the brutality of the penal laws and the hopes centred in the United Irish movement. The dominant note in "The Wearin' o' the Green" is national, the deathless hope of the Irish race, even in the face of the direst adversity, is strikingly evident in it. It has been described by an authority that cannot be accused of partiality, the London Atheneum, as "the finest street ballad ever written." Dion Boucicault introduced an altered version of the song in one of his plays, and this has given rise to the erroneous belief held by some that Mr. Boucicault wrote it.

Scarcely any Irish poet or ballad writer used the English language in verse-making before the latter part of the eighteenth century. Gaelic was the language of the Irish poets before that time.

Though the words of "The Wearin' o' the Green" are inspiriting and artful in their unaffectedness, it is in its music its greatest charm is. It makes the listener's heart beat faster, his blood course quicker and warmer. As an inspiring marching tune it is unexcelled.

A musical critic has given it as his opinion that airs like "The Wearin' o' the Green," "Dixie" and other old but ever-popular pieces influence and thrill in an unusual manner those who listen to them because the rhythm harmonizes with the beating of the human heart.
